Canada: One nation divided

A sombre Maureen McTeer walks with defeated Joe, as elated Trudeau announces victory

Western void spells trouble for Trudeau

Times News Services

The East is Liberal red, the West a mixture of Tory blue and NDP orange, the country split down its central axis in partisan colors.

And it all spells trouble for unity-minded prime minister-elect Pierre Trudeau.

In the 282-seat House of Commons after Monday's federal election, party standings, barring recounts, will be Liberals 146, Progressive Conservatives 103, and New Democratic Party 32.

The Liberal return to power and to majority government after nine months of Tory rule under Joe Clark started in the Atlantic provinces, surged through Quebec and peaked in Ontario, before flagging in Manitoba and dying in the West.

No Liberals were elected west of Winnipeg, the Tories took all 21 Alberta seats, and the NDP won 26 seats in the four western provinces. In B.C., the Conservatives took 16 and the NDP 12. The Conservatives captured two ridings in the Far North and the NDP one.

Voting in one riding — Frontenac in Quebec— was postponed to March 24 because of the death during the campaign of the Social Credit candidate. The Liberals won it in the last election.

In all, the Liberals picked up 25 seats from the Conservatives, five from the NDP and five from the Social Credit en route to victory. The NDP also took 10 from the Conservatives, who managed to take one from the Liberals.

The Liberals won 46 per cent of the popular vote to 31 per cent for the Conservatives and about 19 for the NDP.

Although the Liberals started their climb back to power in the Atlantic provinces, where they took the only two NDP seats and gained five from the Conservatives — including the riding held by David MacDonald, Conservative secretary of state — they cemented the win in Ontario.

They picked up 20 ridings for a total of 52 on a campaign that saw them hammer at the damage the Conservative budget would do to consumers' pocketbooks.

The Conservatives held 38 Ontario seats, compared with the 57 they swept last year, while the NDP dropped one for a total of five.

Despite the Liberal strength in Ontario, only one cabinet minister was defeated in that province. Ron Atkey, minister of immigration, went down to John Roberts, himself a former cabinet minister under Trudeau, in Toronto St. Paul's.

Three familiar NDP names lost to Liberals — John Rodriguez in Nickel Belt, Cyril Symes, the NDP energy spokesman, in Sault Ste. Marie, and veteran Arnold Peters in Timiskaming.

French power stormed back into federal government as Quebecers voted massively for Trudeau and delivered half the seats for the Liberal majority across Canada.

The Liberals, much as predicted, crushed all opposition parties in Quebec, wiping out Social Credit leader Fabien Roy and his four sitting MPs.

The Liberals won nearly 68 per cent of the popular vote and all but one of the 74 seats being contested.

The victory was a vindication for Liberal strategists who opted for a carefully controlled campaign of attacking the Conservatives — especially for its budget and policy flip-flops — while keeping its own commitments to a minimum.

Even before the voting, Conservative officials were saying that if they lost it would be because they had failed to explain the reasons for their tough budget and to make voters aware of what they had done since taking office.

The outcome also was at least a partial vindication of opinion polls, which consistently showed the Liberals with a strong lead.

The result appeared to be as much an expression of voter dissatisfaction with Clark as prime minister — just as last May they had turned against Trudeau.

Clark's future as party leader was put in question by the outcome, although he received a strong endorsement from John Crosbie, author of the ill-fated budget and victor in the Newfoundland riding of St. John's West.

Welcome to the '80s: Pierre

Times News Sevices

OTTAWA — "Well, welcome to the '80s," a smiling Pierre Elliott Trudeau told thousands of exuberant supporters after his election victory Monday night.

Speaking in the gilded, overstuffed ballroom of the Chateau Laurier Hotel, Trudeau asked the 2,000 over-heated Liberals in attendance — many of whom groaned and booed the mention of Clark's name — to share his "grudging admiration for Mr. Clark."

As chants of 'Trudeau!, Trudeau!, Trudeau!' faded, the Liberal Leader said he would seek the advice of the opposition parties during the coming parliamentary session, particularly on issues involving western Canada, where his party won only two seats.

In Spruce Grove, Alta., Joe Clark gracefully accepted the verdict of the voters but hinted that in spite of the crushing defeat of his young government he intends to stay on as Progressive Conservative leader for some time to come.

"I was honored to serve my first six months as the prime minister of Canada," Clark told about 1,000 gamely cheering supporters in the town arena in his riding that was the scene of a rousing victory celebration only nine months earlier.

As the 40-year-old Clark spoke, his wife, Maureen McTeer, stood at his side, wiping back tears.

One of Clark's closest friends and advisers, Senator Lowell Murray, said the result was a shock to the Clark group.

They had expected the election to be much closer.

For Ed Broadbent and the New Democrats, it was a bittersweet outcome.

As the last results of Monday's general election trickled in early today from British Columbia, Broadbent was exultant at the news that his party had gained more seats than ever before — more than even the most optimistic NDPer had dared predict.

But the Liberal tide which had rolled over the country had also deprived the party of all the clout it had wielded in the last minority Parliament.

The NDP leader told cheering supporters at his campaign headquarters here that he was "immensely proud" that "we have won more seats and have a higher percentage of the popular vote than ever in the history of our party."

William Head escapers feared drowned

A search continued today for two William Head prisoners officials believe may have drowned while attempting a desperate swim to freedom late Monday night.

David William Stevenson, 23, of Kamloops, and Samuel Sidemny El Safadi, 18, of Peace River, were first missed at a 10 p.m. head count.

Prisoner director Arli Bender said cries for help — apparently from the sea off Pedder Bay — were heard by some inmates and staff about a half hour earlier.

Bender said a prison spotlight failed to pick up any sign of anyone in trouble and an RCMP helicopter swept the sea with its spotlight with the same result.

The rescue boat from Pearson College and a boat from Pedder Bay Marina also joined in but the search was finally abandoned until daybreak when the police helicopter and RCMP patrol boat out of Sidney arrived at the scene.

Bender said shoreline searches have also drawn a blank.

He said when the cries for help were first heard, the sea was relatively calm with a slight swell.

"But within half an hour a wind came up and by 11 p.m. it was really rough," he said today.

Stevenson was serving two years for breaking and entering and theft and was due for release in August.

El Safadi was serving two years and five months for similar offences and was due to be released in December.

Both arrived at William Head only 12 days ago.

"They were here such a short time we didn't have a chance to really assess them," Bender said adding that if the pair did in fact try to escape by swimming, the decision was likely spontaneous.

"Inmates who have been here any time know the risks. They think anyone who tries has to be slightly mad," Bender said.

Calif. deluge in 7th day

Times News Services

Relentless rain drenched southern California for a seventh straight day, bringing more mudslides and high water that forced thousands of persons from their homes and drove damage estimates into the millions of dollars. Flooding continued in Utah and Arizona.

As the rain continued, tourists were urged to avoid the desert Palm Springs area, where 1,000 persons were advised to leave their homes. Rail travel was interrupted between Los Angeles and San Diego because a bridge had been weakened by the storms.

By late Monday, at least 24 persons had died because of the weather, including 18 in California, three in Arizona and three U.S. tourists in Tijuana, Mexico, authorities said.

One Los Angeles woman was suffocated by mud that oozed into her own living room. A child in Rancho Cucamonga was swept into a sewer drain during the weekend.

At least 26 homes have been destroyed and another 152 damaged.

With a fifth storm predicted for waterlogged California today and a sixth expected late tonight or early Wednesday, thousands of persons were evacuated from areas ravaged by floodwaters and mudslides.

Hydro hike beats PUC to punch

By JAKE BANKY

B.C. Hydro outmanoeuvred the government Monday by announcing an average seven-per-cent electricity rate increase effective April 1.

The increase will add as much as 22 per cent to the bills of large industrial electricity users.

Hydro moved on the hike before the promised Public Utilities Commission could be put into gear.

The provincial energy policy announced Feb. 4 gives the PUC responsibility for full regulation of both the electricity and gas sections of B.C. Hydro.

Energy Minister Bob McClelland said the rate increase will be reviewed by the commission when it is set up but he will not freeze Hydro rates until that time, as demanded by Nanaimo NDP MLA Dave Stupich.

"I think the commission should be established very soon and there should be public hearings on the proposed increase," Stupich said.

"I am not saying there should not be an increase but at this time the government should block the proposal until the utilities commission is established and can review it."

McClelland has not said when the change-over from the old B.C. Energy Commission to the new PUC will be made.

NDP energy critic Chris D'Arcy said the government is being led down the garden path by Hydro and the new energy policy has no teeth.

Starting April 1 the new basic bi-monthly rate for electricity will be $5, up from $4.50.

The charge per kilowatt hour will remain unchanged at 4.5 cents for the first 550 kilowatt hours.

After that it will be three cents a kilowatt hour, up from 2.65 cents.

Hydro chairman Robert Bonner said the new rate should encourage energy conservation because the "more you use, the greater the increase."

The new rates will mean an average increase of $3 a year for an apartment dweller not using electricity for home or water heating, $33.48 a year for a home-owner with an electrical water heater and an average $96.48 a year for a house with electric heat and hot water.

In addition to the residential increase there are rate hikes for almost all commercial, institutional and small industrial customers.

A small percentage, mostly those with heavy industrial use of electricity, will be hit by increases ranging up to 19 per cent.

Large industrial customers such as pulp and paper mills, sawmills, mines and electro-chemical plants will pay 22 per cent more for their power.

The increases are expected to add about $70 million a year to Hydro's gross revenue, Bonner said.

TV goof election offense

Len Charlish is wondering today if he's in trouble.

Charlish is general manager of Victoria Cablevision Ltd., and more than an hour before the polls closed here Monday night, two U.S. network newscasts on the company's system told Greater Victoria viewers of the Liberal landslide.

A chagrined Charlish explained that while the company did have some people monitoring newscasts, they watched the wrong stations.

"There is the possibility we'll be facing a fine on this one," Charlish said.

News of the Liberal win was reported on the CBS and NBC newscasts between 6 and 7 p.m.

Charlish said the U.S. networks had given assurances they wouldn't report the outcome prematurely.

Broadcasting election results in any area before polls close is illegal under the Elections Act and the regulations of the Canadian Radio and Television Commission, but controlling U.S. radio and TV stations remains a problem.

Cable TV companies are expected to black out election results from U.S. sources until the polls close.

"Last year, we did monitor the darn thing," Charlish said, adding this year there simply was a slip-up.

Charlish said he doubts the premature release of the news would have much of an impact on voting here.

"The influence must have been minimal," he said.

He said anyone with an antenna can pick up U.S. radio or TV broadcasts and it is basically impossible to prevent Canadians from learning what's happening as results come in from polls across the country.

Crosbie, who said the Liberals will find themselves "assassinated and abominated" because they now will have to deal with all the problems the Conservatives had been trying to tackle, promised to back Clark as long as he wants to stay on.

Robert Coates, national Conservative party president, says he will not call for a leadership review despite his disagreement with some of Joe Clark's policies.

"My job is to unite the party once again," said Coates after being re-elected for the 10th straight time Monday in Cumberland Colchester.

Clark's leadership was "not perfect," he said, but there were more things wrong than the leadership.

Coates had been critical of Clark's failure to include some veteran Conservative members in his cabinet and warned him about the dangers of swinging too far away from the party's roots.

"The party has to go back to being Conservative and it must reflect the views of the people back in the constituencies," Coates said."

Clark established some records as prime minister. At 39, he was the youngest person ever elected to Canada's top political office and at 40 he now becomes the youngest former prime minister.

His stay in office of 272 days also was the shortest of any elected administration.

The election presents the reborn Liberal government with a double dilemma in trying to deal again with national unity problems on two fronts at once — the perennial pressure for Quebec sovereignty on the one hand and western alienation on the other.

If the divisions appear to be tearing the country apart, the election also gave expression to an attitude that spanned the regions — rejection of the hard-line domestic and foreign policies of Joe Clark's short-lived Conservative administration.

A massive majority of about two-thirds of the electorate combined against the government to generate Liberal gains in the East and advances by the New Democratic Party in the West.

The election appeared to shunt the country toward the political left in terms of economic policy and foreign relations since both the Liberals and NDP place more emphasis on government guidance of the economy and on the promotion of detente as the response to international tensions.

The Clark government's activities in both fields were symbolized by an austerely conservative budget and a hawkish line internationally. He clung to such policies as the plan to dismantle the state-owned Petro-Canada despite the vulnerability of his parliamentary minority and in the face of evidence of their unpopularity as reflected in opinion polls.

The majority appeared to vote for a more moderate approach to economic problems, a more gradual rise in the price of gasoline, for example, and a softer voice in foreign affairs.

They also voted against a man who, though obviously well-meaning, seemed unsure of foot, both in personal manner — the object of dozens of Joe Clark jokes — and administrative style.

In Quebec only Conservative Supplies Minister Roch LaSalle in Joliette survived the Liberal steamroller.

It was the greatest sweep of Quebec since Mackenzie King won all 65 seats in 1921. Blown away, along with the Socreds, were Tory ministers Heward Grafftey in Missisquoi and Industry and Commerce Minister Robert de Cotret in Berthier, the ex-Senator whose political career is now probably finished.

Other wipeouts among the Conservative candidates: Prime Minister Clark's press counsellor Andre Payette; former UN minister Marcel Masse, and two well-known Union Nationale members — Fernand Grenier and Armand Russell — who quit the Quebec National Assembly to run as Conservatives.

The NDP, as usual, elected nobody in Quebec. But the party did increase its popular vote from six per cent last May to nearly ten percent. The Conservatives dropped about one point in popular vote to 12.5 percent while the hapless Socreds got less than six percent, compared to 17 percent last time.

Other parties, including the separatist Union Populaire, independents, marxist-leninists, communists and the debunking Rhinos, could muster no more than a combined popular vote of four percent.

The Liberal triumph brought back many faces which had become familiar as the symbol of French Power in Ottawa: Marc Lalonde, Jean Chretien, Andre Ouellet, Jeanne Sauve, Monique Begin, all former ministers and likely to be so again in a Trudeau cabinet.

Lalonde wore a grin as broad as the St. Lawrence as he savoured the victory and anticipated a return to power.

"Mr. Trudeau is more popular than ever in Quebec," he crowed, adding that the Conservatives' "senseless budget" and the governement's image of blundering had helped to do the Tories in.

Lalonde said the new Liberal government's priorities would be the preparation of a budget to stimulate economic growth and the revitalization of Petrocan, which the Conservatives had been attempting to dismantle.

The Quebec sweep scored by the firmly federalist Trudeau may be seen as a setback to separatist sentiment in that province. But it by no means guarantees a one-sided vote for federalism in the coming sovereignty-association referendum.

And the near shutout of Liberals in the West gives voice again to the alienation of that region from central political sentiments.

A major challenge for Trudeau, with only two MPs west of Ontario and none west of Manitoba, is to find some way to provide western representation in his administration and overcome the disaffection of a third of the nation.

The national unity problem thus is more complex than the Quebec-Canada rift that helped propel Trudeau to power the first time in 1968.

His response will be put to the test imminently. He faces both the late-spring referendum and the urgent need to find a federal-provincial formula for the management and pricing of western oil — some kind of compromise between eastern consumers who gave him his majority and western producers who spurned him.

Jet fighter explodes

OTTAWA (CP) — A CF-101 Voodoo jet interceptor crashed and exploded in flames today while attempting to land at Uplands Airport.

Fate of the pilot and navigator has not been determined.

The Voodoo is one of Canada's oldest fighter planes. The jet was bought in the U.S. in the early 60s.

Parcel bomb kills man

MONTREAL (CP) — The president of a vending machine company was killed today when a parcel delivered to his office exploded, police said.

Two other persons were injured in the downtown explosion. Police would not identify the victim, but said he was the president of Atlantic Vending Corp., which sells vending and pinball machines.

Iran military power given to Bani-Sadr

United Press International

Ayatollah Khomeini today handed over his powers as supreme commander of Iran's military to President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, Iranian news reports said.

The announcement of the change came in a terse report by the official Pars news agency and in a Tehran Radio broadcast monitored in London.

The reports said the ailing Khomeini, 79, has issued an order appointing Bani-Sadr commander-in-chief of the Iranian armed forces in his place.

In his message to the president, Khomeini said that "at this sensitive stage when the need for centralization is greater than at any other time," Bani-Sadr was appointed to "represent" him as the supreme commander, as defined by Iran's new constitution, Tehran Radio said.

"It is hoped that with your efficiency, the affairs of the country and the armed forces will continue running according to Islamic principles," the message added.

There was no switch in the post of defence minister, held by Mostafa Chamran.

Khomeini's order, coupled with an earlier decision by the ruling Revolutionary Council to give Bani-Sadr full executive powers, broadened the 47-year-old president's power base considerably.

In Vienna, U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim told the Austrian newspaper Die Presse today that the hostages could be released within two weeks.

The release would be achieved through the efforts of the committee set up by Waldheim to examine Iran's charges of the crimes during the shah's regime, the secretary-general said.

Asked how long he estimated the panel's work in Iran would take, Waldheim answered, "About one to two weeks."

He stressed that the five men appointed to the commission had passed muster with officials in Washington as well as Iran's President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh.

In Tehran, Iranian government officials have refused to confirm or deny reports circulating here that the UN-appointed commission is to arrive here Wednesday.

Details of the role and mandate of the commission are expected upon the arrival from Paris of Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh later today.

Meanwhile, the New York Times today quoted an unnamed U.N. official as saying the hostages must be released by Feb. 27 or the commission would leave Tehran. Other officials would only acknowledge that "there is a time frame," the newspaper said.

Tito still grave

BELGRADE (AP) — Doctors said today they have been able to reduce the kidney problems of President Tito but his condition remains grave.

They said that intensive treatment for the 87-year-old leader is continuing.

"The general state of health of President Josip Broz Tito continues to be grave," the presidential medical committee said in its mid-day bulletin.

"With application of active therapy, kidney insufficiency problems are less marked," they said. "Other necessary measures of intensive treatment are also being applied."

Money Talk

A series in which Montreal Trust answers your questions.

"RRSP's vs. inflation"

"Why on earth should I invest in an RRSP with you or anyone else, when inflation is going to make the money I've saved for retirement worth so much less?"

This is a question that plagues a lot of people with respect to all types of saving, not just RRSP's.

However, in reply to your question, one of the advantages of an RRSP is that it can counteract inflation by offering tax deferral. This gives income earners an excellent chance to maintain the purchasing power of their savings.

Here is an example that compares saving through an RRSP to a similar non-registered savings plan.

Suppose you're 35 years old in a 35% marginal tax bracket, and you put away $500 a year in non-registered savings paying an annual interest rate of 9%. By age 65 you will have accumulated $57,334 after taxes, assuming that the first $1000 of interest earned each year is tax exempt.

This compares with $114,289 that you could have accumulated in an RRSP, inclusive of deferred taxation (i.e. your RRSP allows you to deposit the same $500 plus the deferred tax of $269.23 for a total of $769.23; and defer taxes on all the interest earned).

By converting both accumulations into a 25 year fixed annuity with a 9% interest rate, and taxing the first year retirement income at 30% rate for each (in the non-registered plan only the interest portion is taxable), the non-registered after tax income in the first year will be $4,589, compared with $8,445 from the RRSP.

Of course, the spending power of these savings could be greatly affected by inflation. For example, at an average inflation rate of 6.5% over the 30-year period, the spending value of the two sums in today's dollars would be equal to $651 and $1,199 respectively.

So, by using an RRSP you can get higher growth on your savings for retirement.

At Montreal Trust, we'll be pleased to explain how RRSP savings tackle inflation in your own particular case. All you have to do is ask. If you have any questions about our services, write, call, or come in and see us at the address below.

Oak Bay was the difference

By AL FORREST

All three major candidates claimed victories of sorts as results of the Victoria riding came in during Monday's federal election.

Defence Minister Allan McKinnon — the real winner — said he was relieved to find he was re-elected.

Second-place NDP candidate Robin Blencoe told supporters the party has almost reached its goal of cutting the Conservative margin in half.

"This is an important achievement. We can win next time."

Liberal Bruce Corbett also claimed increased support, although late returns showed the Grits slipped slightly from last year.

The final result:
McKinnon, PC: 25,058
Blencoe, NDP: 17,093
Corbett, Lib.: 7,145
Higgins, Rhino: 441
Ratzlaff, Marxist-Leninist: 47

Both McKinnon and Blencoe agreed Oak Bay had made the difference.

Blencoe ran even with McKinnon in the Saanich panhandle, increased the NDP support in Fairfield and James Bay and got out a larger number of the traditional left voters in Victoria West.

As a result, McKinnon's winning margin was cut to 7,965 from 12,644 in less than a year.

The 1979 result:
Tories: 27,988
NDP: 15,344
Liberals: 7,761
Marx-Leninist: 89

In the election seven months ago, McKinnon won the Saanich panhandle as well as Fairfield and the NDP lead in James Bay and Vic West had been less pronounced.

This time Oak Bay (and the Rockland strip) came back as strongly as ever for the Tories but it was a close battle across the remainder of the riding.

Here are some examples:

Fairfield: McKinnon 89, Blencoe 99, Corbett 23.

Saanich panhandle: McKinnon 85, Blencoe 75, Corbett 22.

An early poll that rocked Tory supporters was the one from the boarding house area of James Bay which had McKinnon at 30, Blencoe at 76 and Corbett at 17 with Higgins at one vote.

But the Conservatives breathed easier when Oak Bay results came in. Here's one Oak Bay poll: McKinnon 161, Blencoe 14, Corbett 20, Higgins 1.

And Rockland: McKinnon 128, Blencoe 34, Corbett 16, Higgins 3.

And the expensive highrise apartments overlooking Beacon Hill Park: McKinnon 123, Blencoe 43, Corbett 34.

The voting turnout in Vic West was a bit larger than expected, giving the NDP a boost. One poll: McKinnon 50, Blencoe 88, Corbett 23, Higgins 4.

Some Vic West polls were by even larger margins.

There were no significant pockets of Liberal support.

The Rhino candidate got one or two votes from most polls.

The Marxist-Leninist vote almost disappeared with not a single vote in what are considered the poorest areas of the riding. But there were a few Ratzlaff votes in affluent Oak Bay.

Blencoe indicated he will be back in four years for another try at the seat, confident he can get a large enough tally from Victoria city to overcome Conservative support in Oak Bay.

Liberal Bruce Corbett, at 24 the youngest candidate in the race, called the election "a learning experience."

HANDS UP, NDP Leader Ed Broadbent asks for silence as he speaks to supporters in Oshawa Monday where he won a personal victory in his home riding. The NDP won 32 seats in the new parliament.

NDP takes three seats to beat out Island PCs

It was the NDP 3-2 over the Conservatives in Monday night's federal voting on Vancouver Island.

United Church minister Jim Manly won Cowichan-Malahat for the NDP, defeating incumbent Conservative Don Taylor, to give the New Democrats three of the island's five seats.

The Conservatives clung to the two southern ridings although Allan McKinnon in Victoria and Don Munro in Esquimalt-Saanich, both had their 1979 margins of victory substantially reduced in the NDP surge.

Manly had stepped down from his pulpit in Ladysmith at the start of the campaign to fight what was expected to be a close battle but his final winning margin of about 4,000 votes was fairly comfortable.

He finished second last year by 1,560 votes.

The riding includes Colwood, Langford and Metchosin which went strongly Tory in 1979. This time around, the NDP caught up.

NDP support remained strong in the Duncan area, which formed part of the riding held by former national NDP leader Tommy Douglas, who has retired.

Further up-Island, Ted Miller was re-elected for the NDP in Nanaimo-Alberni with an increased margin over Tory challenger Scott Van Alstine.

Similarly, Ray Skelly of the NDP was re-elected with a larger plurality over Al Lazerte of the Tories.

Provincial Liberal party president Shirley McLoughlin created a bit of a stir in the north Island riding when she won the first poll but from then on, she trailed badly as the vote from Powell River and other strong union areas came in.

The Liberals ran third in all five Island ridings.

Rhino candidates came fourth, ahead of Communist and Marxist-Leninist entries.

The only candidate outside the three major parties to run ahead of the Rhinos was independent Philip Ney in Esquimalt-Saanich, who campaigned on an anti-abortion platform.

Don't blame media for Clark image: he did it himself!

OTTAWA — The major misjudgement of these final few weeks is that Joe Clark somehow has been unfairly defeated because of his "image."

The theory — pushed strongly by Clark people and almost accepted by the guilt-ridden media — is that the arrogant Trudeaucrats are back in the throne room because too much emphasis was placed on the way Clark walked, talked and waggled his spindly fingers.

It's not true. It's not true because the defeat of Joe Clark signals that not for a long time will the Canadian public accept as prime minister a person who really has no reason for being there other than that he has mastered the arcane mechanics of party politics.

Joe Clark, a very decent fellow who won a lot of fans among formerly derisory reporters because of the dignified, courageous way he faced his obvious defeat in the final days, is not really a leader.

He is — as one would expect of any 40-year-old whose sole and abiding interest since high school has been party politics — a diligent organizer, a shrewd analyzer of necessary tactics, a synthesizer who, as he confesses, has spent 15 years of his life in meetings.

That combination, while very useful in climbing the party ladder, does not make a leader.

Probably the number one reason why Joe Clark, not being a natural leader, was resoundingly defeated last night is that he does not attract strong people around him.

It's a cruel thesis of the Harvard School of Business Administration that first-class men attract first-class people around them; second-class men attract fourth-class people.

It has never really been grasped (except by the voters last night) that the celebrated foul-ups on Clark's disastrous world tour had nothing to do with the meaningless loss of his luggage.

The significance was that Clark had somehow surrounded himself with a staff that could neither read an airline schedule nor react to it.

Those very same people are with him today. He has not changed one. The same people who saw (and nurtured) him through Jerusalem, Petrocan, the budget — and the decision not to delay a vote on Dec. 13 when it was obvious they would lose it.

The prime minister in the final, fatal days allowed that someone had "done a number on me." As if he were some neighborhood virgin complaining of a pristine reputation being besmirched.

It's as if a completely phoney, invented image could be created for such a public person. No such animal exists.

Every politician has an "image" — and is responsoible for it. A wise man once said that every man at the age of 40 is responsible for his own face. So is any politician who ventures into public life.

An image is made up of many things. Clark's twitchiness in public, his nervousness, came across to the public as indecisiveness. His ludicrous stand on Jerusalem was viewed as pure Toronto expediency — and indicated to the public that a nervous young man of not great self-confidence had — despite a journey to Israel — absorbed neither religious, cultural nor historical insight into that area.

All politicians live on image. Churchill used image to devastating effect with the means of his day — radio, newsreels, cigar, bluster. Dief had an image of dynamism before the public perceived that he was a ditherer.

It was never clear to the public after May 22, that Clark stood for anything but expediency. (Trudeau, who has run possibly the most arrogant and cynical, empty campaign of modern times, at least in the public mind is known for his resolute views on Quebec and national unity.)

The nasty jokes about Clark — which originated among politicians and press close around him — filtered down to the voters and the schoolyard. But jokes merely confirm the public's impression of a politician.

Robert Stanfield was not done in by the football-fumble photograph; it just reinforced the electorate's opinion. A dim-witted Gerald Ford appeared as someone who would bump his head. Trudeau didn't lose votes by going to a New York disco. He gained them.

Joe Clark won a lot of Brownie points in the end with the gutsy way he faced obvious defeat. But no one did a number on him. He did it to himself.

Sorry. Because he deserved — compared to the other guy — to win.

The devil you don't know

The traditional maxim is "Better the devil you know than the devil you don't."

But the Canadian people turned it around Monday when they decided it was better to elect to government a party with quite unknown policies rather than one whose policies they knew — and didn't like. Moreover, they elected a prime minister who has promised to resign long before his term is over and for whom there is not yet any obvious successor.

It is remarkable that, with a majority government elected, it remains impossible to predict with certainty any future government action. We know that oil prices will go up, but have no idea by how much. We know that some action will be taken to control the federal deficit, but have no idea what or when. We know that national unity will probably be a major issue of the new prime minister, but have no idea what his plans are for constitutional reform.

The essential message of the Liberals to the electorate throughout the past eight weeks has been: "Trust us. We won't tell you what we'll do, but you know it couldn't be worse than what Joe Clark has been doing."

The electorate agreed to offer Trudeau and his team that trust. The hostility and suspicion shown towards the Liberals just nine months ago has evaporated — at least in southern Ontario where it really mattered.

But the strong swing to the Liberals in the industrial heartlands of Ontario has put western Canada, and B.C. in particular, outside the mainstream of federal Canadian political life.

B.C. was the only province where the Liberals' share of the popular vote actually declined from the last election. Art Phillips, who had been the only Liberal standard-bearer west of Winnipeg, lost his seat to Tory Pat Carney. That leaves the Liberals without a single representative in Saskatchewan, Alberta or B.C.

If the west is to be represented at all in the new Trudeau administration, it will have to be through the appointment of senators who can then be added to the cabinet — the same method Clark used to give his cabinet a little Quebec representation.

B.C. showed itself to be, more than ever, a two-party, highly polarized province, federally as well as provincially. The New Democrats, wiped out in Atlantic Canada and struggling to maintain their small piece of ground in Ontario, owe more than one-third of their total seats won to B.C.

The other party may best be described as the anti-NDP party. Federally, it is the Conservatives. Provincially, it is Social Credit, which is supposed to combine the best of Tory and Liberal philosophy, but instead often looks as though it has no coherent set of political principles other than an abiding hatred for socialism.

The middle ground has vanished, and with it any hopes for a resurgence of a true Liberal party.

There was a national defeat in Monday's election, but there was no national victory. The reborn Liberal machine that wiped out the Creditistes in Quebec and steamrollered its way through southern Ontario began to cough and sputter about the Lakehead, gave a couple of dying gasps in Manitoba, and collapsed.

For better or worse, the next few years will be interesting. Trudeau is in that rare position for a politician: he can do what he thinks is right without having to worry about being re-elected.

Maybe that is reason for the rest of the country to worry.

Still a good idea

It seems ironic that a government body bent on piping sewage into the sea is at the same time trying to establish a very sensible system for the disposal of septic tank contents.

On the one hand the Capital Regional Board is bucking expert environmental evidence that argues against reducing the length of the Clover Point outfall, while on the other, it is in the throes of purchasing a 12-acre site to build a sewage composting system. Recycling sewage into fertilizer is a desirable and sane alternative to the dumping the waste either in landfill sites or the ocean.

Regional board director Mac Tipton, whose home is the closest building to the proposed site off Windfall Road in Metchosin, envisions the recycling project as the start of an over-all regional retrieval system for sewage. Furthermore, he notes that there is a lot of recoverable energy from sewage and hopes the Metchosin scheme will act as a pilot project.

We share Tipton's belief in recycling and recovering energy and hope this can indeed be a sign of things to come. Similiar composting endeavors are underway in several U.S. cities. There is also one in Kelowna. In addition, much research is being done on the concept of recovering methane gas from sewage.

But it appears Tipton's enthusiasm for the project in its present location might be short-lived unless he can convince his neighbors and constituents that the proposed site will not harm their neighborhood.

Within three days of the first reports on the land sale to the regional board, residents opposing the location of the project were busy circulating a petition. The Albert Head Ratepayers Association also believes the site is unacceptable. This backlash has been quick, with little time or information to access the impact of the project.

Resident concerns — real or imaginary — over increased truck traffic, visual impact and smell are legitimate. These objections were predictable and should have been anticipated by the regional board before spending $150,000 to purchase the land. Since the money has now been spent, it is up to Tipton and the other board members to inform area residents properly so that they have the opportunity to develop a considered opinion.

If, after a thorough and informed public debate, the site proves unfeasible, the board might take consolation in knowing that real estate prices are going up all the time.

However, the concept of recycling sewage is good, and if the board is forced to seek a more remote site, it should waste no time in doing so.

Trudeau now untouchable

OTTAWA — We have made Pierre Elliott Trudeau into the most powerful Prime Minister in our history.

Other Prime Ministers have won larger victories. Two among them, John A. MacDonald and Mackenzie King, both won more elections, and both as well like Trudeau, returned from defeat to win again. Trudeau's power is unique, though, because by the way he was — on his own terms and in his own way — he has made himself untouchable.

Untouchable, first in Parliament. There, Trudeau's majority will keep him out of the reach of the Opposition parties. Among these, the Conservatives will be demoralized by their defeat, and will be, soon, leaderless. The Creditistes are gone entirely. Only the New Democrats have come through the election more numerous, and more confident, than before.

No promises

Next, in government. Trudeau will be untouchable here because he has no promises, almost, to keep. (Abolition of the 18 cents a gallon excise tax, and a $35 a month increase for low-income pensioners, are the exceptions). From the electorate, and also from his own party to whom he made no promises either, Trudeau in effect has won for himself a blank cheque that he now can fill in as he sees fit.

Lastly, within the political process itself. Trudeau has made himself politically untouchable by his pledge to leave "well" before the next election. Public opinion, and public prejudices, therefore can no longer influence Trudeau to take any decisions that he decides, whether for the good or the bad, that he ought not to take.

As an untouchable Prime Minister, Trudeau thus either can retreat into himself if he chooses, or he can, as easily, reach out as he never did before during his 11 years of power.

PIERRE TRUDEAU
. . . with a blank cheque

In his moment of victory last night, on the same stage where 273 days ago he conceeded defeat, Trudeau reached out.

He reached out to his opponents, to Joe Clark whom he praised for his "courage in the face of adversite", and to Ed Broadbent whom he praised for his "selfless devotion". And he reached out to the west, which this time rejected the Liberals even more decisively than in any of Trudeau's earlier elections. He would "seek advice", Trudeau declared, from opposition MPs, "in those parts of the country where we are weaker than we would like to be."

Above all, Trudeau seemed to try consciously to reach out to all Canadians — and to pull them together. He reminded his audience that Parliament, "is the only national body which has the mandate to speak for all Canadians." He pledged that his government would be, "the government of every part of this country." And he praised Quebecers as "the first to show others that it is possible to be proud Quebecers and proud Canadians at the same time."

In the moment of victory, magnanimity comes easily. Trudeau's rhetoric soon will bump against the reailty of negotiations with Alberta to set a new oil price, and of the test that two-sided pride of Quebecers will be put to in their referendum.

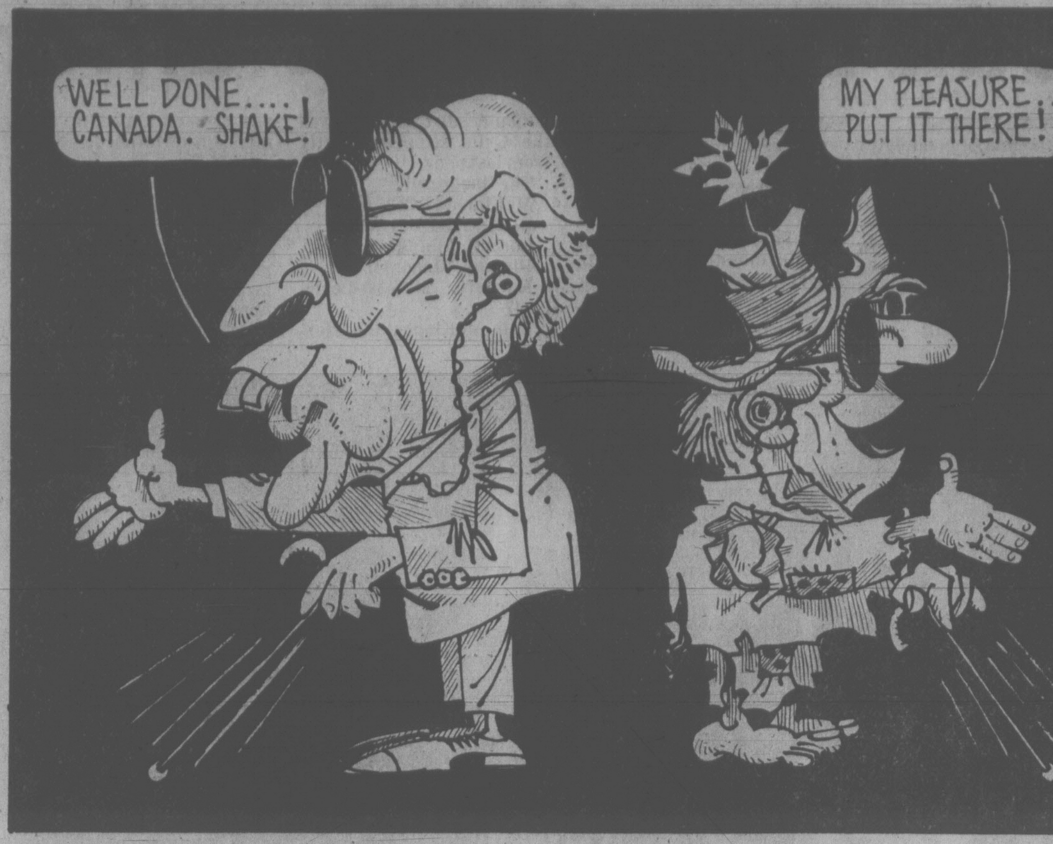
As well, if the election itself is any preview of how Trudeau will exercise his unprecedented power, he will use it to retreat into isolation. During the campaign, he told Canadians as little as possible, and saw them — no TV debate, no press conference, no hotline shows — as little as possible.

Unpredictable

Yet, from defeat six months ago to sweeping victory today, and from resignation, in November, to a return as party leader three weeks later, Canadians now know that all they can expect from Pierre Elliott Trudeau is the unexpected.

"I have promises to keep," said Trudeau, closing his speech with the familiar line from Robert Frost, "and miles to go before I sleep"

He may use the power we've given him to go to sleep, or he may use it to travel more miles than ever has before. Either way, the decision will be his alone. No-one, now, can touch him.



WELL DONE.... CANADA. SHAKE!
MY PLEASURE... PUT IT THERE!

How to pick a president

WASHINGTON — A lady in New Hampshire, suffering from a plague of candidates, writes to complain about the way we choose our presidents. I can tell she's a lady by her handwriting, and she insists that the press must know some better way.

Of course we do. The ideal way in the Republican Party is to stop all this expensive running around in the cold and simply to prefer their candidates in alphabetical order — Anderson, Baker, Bush, Connally, and Reagan. By this natural acceptance of alphabetical logic, the Republicans could deal at a stroke with the problems of looks, experience and age, and save money and energy in the process.

Anderson not only looks presidential on TV, but actually is presidential. That should not necessarily be a fatal handicap.

Handicaps

Baker is attractive, experienced, and popular with his colleagues in the Congress, but he has two serious defects: He is funny and he is short. He has the depth for the job but not the height. We simply cannot have two short men contending for the presidency in November, particularly if one of them has a sense of humor.

Bush, who is next in our GOP alphabetical line, clearly has the height for the job and is vaguely Lincolnian in appearance. But he also has a handicap: he is under 60. This usually makes Republican convention delegates uneasy if not downright suspicious. Also lately he has got to talking about the dangers of atomic war as if they were an awkward rise in the interest rates. But his main problem is that he is regarded as a New Englander from Texas, and vice versa, which could hurt him in both places.

John Connally, coming after the A's and the B's, is a bit of a puzzle in this corner. The last political idea I had — back in 1960 — was that the successful presidential candidates of this century all had two identical letters in their names:

Roosevelt the First and Roosevelt the Second (two o's); Woodrow Wilson (two o's); Dwight David Eisenhower (two D's). But when Hubert Horatio Humphrey (three H's) lost, and Richard Nixon won, it seemed that even Connally, with two n's and two l's, was in trouble.

Even so, Connally should have been able to sweep the Republican field. He fits the American mood of the moment: he is big, brassy, handsomely theatrical, conservative and hawkish. But he's a switcher and suffers from the weakness of saying what he thinks.

The Democrats have a different nominating problem. They cannot follow the alphabetical order of selection simply because it's against their tradition to follow any order at all. If they were to go alphabetical this year, Governor Brown of California would have to be their first choice, ahead of Carter and Kennedy, and this is obviously ridiculous, because no man can possibly face the torments of the presidency without the help of a loving and critical wife.

Accordingly, the Democrats will probably have to go back to their old process of natural selection. They are the party of the "smoke-filled room." Their glory days were when the bosses picked the Roosevelts and the Trumans. It was when they introduced democracy into their system of selection — with caucuses to pick delegates for other caucuses, and primary elections in 37 states, dominated by television and political singing commercials — that they lost control.

The most successful institution at picking leaders in the Free World today is the Roman Catholic Church, probably because it does not believe in free or popular selection. It has chosen two remarkable popes in the last couple of years, both of them virtually unknown, but both of whom had the gift of language, even of poetry, and could therefore help the people understand the confusion of the age.

It's a silly notion, of course, but no sillier than reading what Jimmy Carter (two m's) and Teddy Kennedy (two d's and two n's — not to mention Chappaquiddick, with two p's and two d's) have been saying about Iran and Afghanistan, when the American people are really wondering about the latest alarming price and inflation news, and why the president wants to register young men and women for a military draft he says he doesn't want.

It might not be too bad to have a convention of the elders of the Republican Party in Detroit and a convention of the Democratic elders in New York to select the presidential candidates.

Neglected subject

Presumably they would discuss what kind of candidates we need to lead this country into the 1980s — a neglected subject these days. The elders would know the cards in the deck, their strengths and weaknesses, and might not even worry too much about whether they were short or tall.

The guess here — we are playing games of course — is that if left to a College of Cardinals of the two parties, they would choose Carter and Mondale on the Democratic side, despite Teddy Kennedy with two d's and two n's; and Baker and Bush, or vice versa, on the Republican side, forgetting Reagan, who has nothing going for him except the people who nominate Republican candidates.

It probably won't work out this way, of course, but you have to have something different to dream about on a Sunday morning.

Far from dull

In the Victoria Times edition for Feb. 6 there appeared in the sports section a piece describing the 1980 All-Star Hockey Game as a dull affair. What an astonishing way to report three hours of athletic enjoyment!

The sustained excitement of Gordie Howe showing the lads how to play the game; the sparkle of a rush by Sittler or Perrault; the plucky scramble of the kids like Gretsky; the combination play of normal antagonists; all these must have been missed by your slumbrous reporter.

Most of all, however, it was just great enjoyment to have the priviledge of watching the big guys having fun in a superb game of shinny on that new pond in Detroit. It was the most entertaining game since Montreal reminded the Russians of who really is best.

It's too bad about your reporter. Next time please send a fan to do a fan's job. — W. L. Howie, 2390 Musgrave Street.

Editor's Note: The story which offended reader Howie was a Canadian Press, not a Times, report. However, the opinion that the game was dull was the consensus of most of the sports writers who were at the game. Which doesn't mean they were right and Mr. Howie was wrong.

Two wives

I wish to comment on the recent arrival in our province of two Soviet defectors via Campbell River.

Our executive, legislative, and judicial branches of government have established guidelines for immigration. How many exceptions are we to make? This sailor: bored with life at sea, bored with his wife and daughter, had to convince his companion, Miss Terekhova, to defect with him. Now he wishes to learn English, obtain a job, and send support money to his wife in Russia.

Are we to encourage shipboard romances and the desertion of wife and child? When do we draw the line and say no? Our country does not need more sailors or cleaning women. To encourage this sort of immigration will only further weaken Canadian and Soviet relations.

Our country is founded upon Christian principles that praise the ideal of brotherhood. But what of the sacrilegious marriage violation of this couple? Will the Soviets give this man a divorce? If not, are we to allow him two wives? Yes, giving to one's brethern is an idealistic golden rule, but what happens when we have no more to give? Will our atheistic brothers return to us some of our wealth? — H. Douglas Round, 204-824 Johnson Street.

Good paper

I commend you heartily on improving the coverage and quality of the Victoria Times. A new section on Lifestyles is topical and well done. And I appreciate reading columnists like Richard Gwyn and Douglas Fisher who come up with new observations and facts on pertinent issues, and do a real analysis of them. It's a good newspaper.

Just one comment about the issue on Jan. 29: I thought the news about the Islamic Conference's unanimous (including the PLO) condemnation of Russia's invasion of Afganistan warrented front page treatment. — It was on page 36! — H. D. Beach, 3443 Cardiff Place.

Have a blitz

I have been reading your paper's excellent articles (Feb. 6, 7) about the tourist business in Victoria. What surprises and disturbs me is that to my knowledge, the business people of Victoria are not being very vocal about the proposed oil tanker traffic in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Victoria is being improved considerably, chiefly to attract tourists. Who is going to come to Victoria when the straits are blackened with oil, dead birds and larger animals on beaches and the foul smell that accompanies such a disaster? I would suggest that the owners of the tourist enterprises put on a huge blitz. Bombard Washington, D.C. with letters, telegrams and petitions of protest.

The managers could supply stationery and stamps, compose several letters and have each employee copy a letter and send it to President Carter and to people in the USA who are sympathetic to our grievance. The Chamber of Commerce could take action in various ways. If enough mail was received by President Carter and other officials they might take notice. I suggest managers writing a few form letters because usually people are too lazy to compose a letter, whereas copying one would be so much simpler and faster.

I think the majority of people in Port Angeles don't want oil farms in their area. Perhaps the business enterprises of Victoria could work together with those in Port Angeles on an outright blitz. After Feb. 18, a bombardment of letters, etc. could be sent to the prime minister and elected officials in Ottawa. The same can be done to our provincial officials immediately. — A. Buness, P.O Box 286, Shawnigan Lake.

Ontario voters delivered victory for Liberals

By CHISHOLM MacDONALD

TORONTO (CP) — Southern Ontario voters, traditional king-makers in federal elections, rolled out their best carpet for the Liberal coronation Monday.

Ending their brief allegiance to the Progressive Conservatives, they took back much of the prized territory they granted the Tories last May and presented it with bonuses to the reborn monarch.

Across the province, Pierre Trudeau's Liberals held on to their 32 seats, grabbed 17 from the Conservatives and three from the NDP. The Tories had to settle for 38 and the New Democrats five.

But it was populous southern Ontario — including 23 ridings in Metropolitan Toronto and 36 others in the Golden Horseshoe area from Oshawa to the Niagara Peninsula — that clinched the Liberal victory. With the Liberals safe in Quebec and the Conservatives strong on the Prairies, the southern Great Lakes region is the traditional pivot in federal elections.

In Toronto, the Liberals held the 10 seats they won in May and added seven others. The Tories, who had 12 last time, dropped to four while the NDP added another to the one it held.

The swing to the Grits was spectacular in a number of key ridings. Typical was Sarnia, where former Liberal cabinet minister Bud Cullen, washed out by the Conservative tide in May, made a resounding comeback.

In Lincoln, controversial Bryce Mackasey, scorned by his opponents in the campaign as a parachute candidate from Quebec, won in a tight fight.

But the NDP also cashed in on Tory losses. Hamilton Mountain, which traditionally swings between Liberal and Conservative, was won by Ian Deans, newcomer on the federal scene but experienced in the Ontario legislature as former New Democrat house leader.

Eastern Ontario also leaned heavily toward the Liberals. The Tories managed to win only one of seven Ottawa-area seats and even Jean Pigott, one of Joe Clark's close advisers, went down to defeat.

The New Democrats, who had hoped to make major inroads in Northern Ontario, lost their only three seats there — Timiskaming, Nickel Belt and Sault Ste. Marie.

But NDP Leader Ed Broadbent, who easily retained his Oshawa seat, took the losses in stride. He said the party more than made up for Eastern Canada losses with gains in the West.

Sinclair Stevens, outspoken treasury board president who easily retained his York-Peel riding, called the Tory defeat "a tragic, tragic happening for Canada."

"It will be doubly ,triply hard to regain our future when we're once again the government of Canada."

"In the Liberal manual, the number one thing is to kill the Conservative leader.

"Clark is a strong man. He's going to be vindicated for his stand (on energy prices). They'll say he was the man who came clean when the rest played political games."

Health Minister David Crombie, who spent much of his campaign recuperating from a heart attack, kept his Toronto Rosedale riding.

"This is the first time in Canadian history that a campaiagn was won without a candidate," he said jokingly.

Ron Atkey, who had promised his mainly Jewish constituents before the May election that the Tories would move the Canadian embassy to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv, was unseated by Liberal John Roberts in Toronto St. Paul's.

"Elections are like the weather," Atkey said Monday. "You have to take the bad with the good and today it really stormed."

Two victorious Liberals took a light-hearted stand.

Cullen, who had been the first cabinet minister in the Sarnia area until his defeat last May, said he wasn't holding his breath for another cabinet post, but added:

"If he (Pierre Trudeau) doesn't select me he's missing a good bet."

And on Hamilton Mountain, Deans had a trite message for the usually entertaining John Crosbie.

"I'd like to suggest to Crosbie that there's an open night at Hamilton Place if ever he wants to go on with his comedy routine."

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald, who had a comparatively tight race to retain her Kingston and The Islands seat, was saddened by the Tory loss.

"When I first came into external affairs it was sad to see how much had not been done. There's little the Liberals ever said on Canada's behalf internationally.

Liberals hit with jammed agenda

By VICTOR MACKIE

OTTAWA — A host of unfinished business confronts the new government jamming up its spring and summer agenda, as a result of two general election in less than a year.

The writs are officially returned March 10 showing who was elected, according to the chief electoral officer Jean-March Hamel. After that date the first session of the new Parliament can be called.

Municipalities that get grants from Ottawa in lieu of taxes are impatiently waiting for the Municipal Grants Act to be passed which increases those grants. There are about 2,000 municipalities effected.

The measure was first introduced by the former Liberal government in February 1979. The spring election last year intervened before the bill was passed. It was re-introduced by the Conservative government with the new higher grants to take effect Jan. 1, 1980. It was waiting approval by Parliament at dissolution when the winter election was called.

There are a large number of appointments that need to be made. They were shelved when the Conservative cabinet found itself suddenly faced with fighting an election campaign in mid-December, just as it was preparing to fill the appointments.

Wednesday of this week, immediately following the election, the deadline set by President Jimmy Carter for the Soviet armed forces to withdraw from Afghanistan will expire. He said if the Russians had not withdrawn by Feb. 20 his government would boycott the Moscow Summer Olympics. The Clark government said it would go along with that decision. Pierre Trudeau gave qualified support to the proposed boycott.

A decision has to be made soon on the choice of a new jet fighter for the armed forces. That decision was on the verge of being made by the former Liberal government when it was defeated in 1979. The Clark government wrestled with it for months and the cabinet was scheduled to choose the new fighter the day before the election was called. It was postponed when Parliament was dissolved.

A defence white paper, setting out the results of a review of defence policy and outlining the policy for the 1980's, is long overdue. Some MPs in the last Parliament advocated holding up the fighter decision until a new white paper had been prepared, that could mean a year's delay.

A foreign policy review for the 1980's is also overdue and should be soon set in motion.

A budget must be presented to the new Parliament as soon as possible. Officials in the finance department point out that there has not been a budget that was fully legislated since April, 1978. Former finance minister Jean Chretien introduced his last budget in November, 1978, but it was never approved by Parliament.

The Clark government had presented a new budget in December. It was defeated in the Commons on a non-confidence vote Dec. 13.

The Garrison Dam and its serious impact on Manitoba waters continues as a vital issue to be followed up by the new administration.

Just four in Joe's cabinet swept away by Grit tide

By NORMA GREENAWAY
The Canadian Press

Joe Clark's minority Progressive Conservative government met a crushing defeat in Monday's election, but only four of 27 cabinet ministers will be missing from Opposition benches when Parliament reopens under the Liberals.

And Pierre Trudeau lost few high-profile MPs and gained several potential cabinet ministers as his Liberals swept to a majority government, wiping out all five members of the Quebec-based Social Credit party in the process.

Supply Minister Roch LaSalle, who has held the Joliette riding since 1968, was the only non-Liberal to survive in Quebec where the Liberals captured 73 of the 74 seats up for grabs.

Finance Minister John Crosbie and External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald, two ministers who figured most prominently in the Tories' bid for re-election, retained their seats.

Crosbie, elected easily in his Newfoundland riding of St. John's West, spent a large part of the campaign stumping the country to defend his belt-tightening budget.

"There's never been an election yet where you can go the the polls and say that you should pay more for anything and be re-elected," he said after the vote.

But the colorful, tough-talking parliamentarian was quick to predict the demise of the Liberals in the next go-round.

"They're going to be assassinated, abominated," he said. "They are going to lose beyond all description in the next election because the son of a guns are going to have to deal with their own past mistakes."

The four cabinet ministers defeated were Economic Development Minister Robert de Cotret, Secretary of State David MacDonald, Science Minister Heward Grafftey and Immigration Minister Ron Atkey. All four fell to Liberals.

De Cotret's beating in the eastern Quebec riding of Berthier-Maskinonge marks another blow to his rocky political career.

First elected in an October, 1978, byelection in Ottawa Centre, he was defeated May 22 and subsequently appointed by Clark to the Senate and given his cabinet post. The 35-year-old economist resigned his Senate seat to contest Monday's election.

Atkey, who lost his Toronto riding of St. Paul's to former Liberal cabinet minister John Roberts, suggested the Tories' rejection at the polls was less a sign of Trudeau's popularity than it was an indication the Conservatives tried to move too quickly on its energy policies.

"I don't think they hated him (Trudeau) that much in May and I don't think they loved him that much tonight," Atkey said.

Health Minister David Crombie, the popular former mayor of Toronto who suffered a heart attack early in the campaign, won re-election in Rosedale riding.

"This is the first time in history that a campaign was won without a candidate," he said, referring to restrictions his health put on his campaigning.

Meanwhile, New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent won his home riding of Oshawa, Ont., but three of his high-profile party critics were beaten by Liberals.

Fonse Faour, the first New Democrat ever elected federally in Newfoundland and the party's justice critic, lost the Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe riding he held for only sixteen months.

And in Northern Ontario, NDP Energy critic Cyril Symes was defeated in Sault Ste. Marie and John Rodriguez, the fiery labor critic, lost in Nickel Belt.

Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy, defeated in Beauce riding, was the only party leader who failed to gain re-election.

Clark won a huge majority in his Alberta riding of Yellowhead, which he has represented since 1972.

But one of his closest advisers, Jean Pigott, lost her bid at a political comeback as an MP in Ottawa Centre to Liberal John Evans, an economist first elected last May.

In British Columbia, however, Tory Pat Carney, a 44-year-old economist and Clark favorite, dumped former Vancouver mayor Art Phillips in Vancouver Centre. Phillips was the only Liberal MP west of Manitoba after the May 22 election; now the Liberals have no representation in either the three most western provinces or the two northern territories.

The Liberal sweep of Quebec resulted in easy election of Trudeau in his home riding of Mount Royal in Montreal and all of the former Liberal cabinet ministers seeking re-election there.

Among prominent Quebecers who could figure in a Trudeau cabinet: Marc Lalonde, energy critic in the last Parliament; Monique Begin, former health minister; Jean Chretien, former finance minister, and Francis Fox, a former solicitor-general.

Quebecer Yvon Pinard, a 39-year-old bilingual lawyer, was re-elected in Drummond and has been mentioned as a possible choice for Commons Speaker.

Dan MacDonald, former Liberal veterans affairs minister, took back the Prince Edward Island seat of Cardigan he held from 1972 to 1979, defeating Wilbur MacDonald.

Bud Cullen, former Liberal immigration minister, was elected in Ontario's Sarnia riding where he lost to a Conservative last May.

Star Liberal candidate Gerald Regan, former Nova Scotia premier, won the Halifax seat from George Cooper, a close friend of Clark's who took the riding by only 15 votes last May.

However, Jack Horner, the Tory turncoat making his second attempt for election as a Liberal, was defeated by an overwhelming margin in the Alberta riding of Crowfoot by Arnold Malone.

Delays face some

OTTAWA (CP) — Results from most of the races in Monday's election should be official within a matter of days, but voters in a handful of ridings may not know for several weeks who their MPs will be.

Five ridings in particular were won by slim margins, and the results could well be subject to official recounts.

None of the close ridings, however, seem to threaten the majority that election-night returns gave to Pierre Trudeau and his Liberal party.

An official in the office of Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel said today that the vote totals in each riding will be rechecked beginning Thursday and official election writs will follow a week later.

That would mean most MPs could be sworn in by the end of this month or early March.

On the basis of preliminary figures, the five closest races Monday were the Ontario ridings of Haldimand-Norfolk, Simcoe North and Thunder Bay-Atikokan, Western Arctic in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon.

The apparent winners in all five ridings were members of the last Commons.

Races won by less than 25 votes once the official figures are in get automatic recounts under the federal elections act. A candidate defeated by a larger margin can also obtain a judicial recount, but has to pay the cost of the job himself.

A total of 281 Commons seats were decided in Monday's election.

NDP wears smile in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's New Democrats wore the smiles after Monday's federal election results were in while spokesmen for the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives expressed concern about a deep east-west split in the country.

Although the Conservatives, with 16 of B.C.'s 28 seats, kept the lion's share they had taken in the 1979 general election, the NDP ate into their strength adding four for a total of 12.

The hapless B.C. Liberals were shut out for the first time since the landslide victory of former Conservative prime minister John Diefenbaker in 1958.

Last May 22 in B.C. the Conservatives won 19 seats, the NDP eight and the Liberals one.

Although the NDP has long been a potent political force in B.C., it has never won as many federal seats in the province as it did Monday.

The New Democrats took Kootenay West, Kootenay East-Revelstoke, Kamloops-Shuswap and Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands from the Conservatives. All the ridings were prime targets for them.

The lone bright spot for the Conservatives was Vancouver Centre, where economist Pat Carney, coaxed into politics by Prime Minister Joe Clark, dumped Art Phillips, the former Vancouver mayor who was the only Liberal elected west of Manitoba in last May's vote.

The Conservatives dropped about three percentage points in their vote, which was gained by the NDP. The Liberal vote tally remained at just over one-fifth of the total.

After the results came in, Liberal spokesmen mentioned their concern that no members of their party had been elected west of Manitoba while the Conservatives spoke of an unhealthy split between eastern and western Canada.

Senator Ray Perrault, former Liberal government leader in the Senate, said Trudeau might have to appoint senators to represent B.C. in his cabinet.

He said he cannot understand why B.C. voters seem to reject Trudeau.

"There has not been a prime minister in the history of this country who has spent more time in British Columbia than Mr. Trudeau."

John Fraser, environment minister and postmaster-general in Clark's cabinet, said the Liberals and eastern Canadians are going to have to face up to the reality that a lot of westerners are unhappy.

"Central Canada wasn't in a mood to face up to some of the things we think they should face up to, so we took a beating," he said of the Conservative losses in the east.

All three of the Conservative cabinet ministers from B.C. were re-elected. Fraser won again in Vancouver South, Small Business Minister Ron Huntington won a comfortable majority in Capilano and Defence Minister Allan McKinnon was returned in Victoria.

While picking up four new seats, the NDP won again in all eight ridings they had taken last time.

Conservative MPs ousted were Bob Brisco in Kootenay West, Don Taylor in Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands, Don Cameron in Kamloops-Shuswap and Stan Graham in Kootenay East-Revelstoke.

Among prominent Liberals defeated were Gordon Gibson in North Vancouver-Burnaby, former provincial party leader; Shirley McLoughlin in Comox-Powell River, provincial party president; Art Lee, former MP who had been touted as a possible winner in Vancouver East and former MP Simma Holt in Vancouver Kingsway.

Roy remains despite defeat

ROY . . .
may run again

MONTREAL (CP) — Fabien Roy says he will remain head of the Social Credit party, even though the Socreds were wiped off the political map Monday when they failed to elect one MP.

Roy may get a second chance to return to the House of Commons, where five Socreds sat at dissolution last December.

After losing in his home riding of Beauce Monday night, he told reporters he may run in the nearby riding of Frontenac, where the election was postponed until March 24 after the Socred candidate, Nelson Lessard, died last week.

Although some political commentators called it the end of an era, Roy gritted his teeth and continued to lash his political opponents. For good measure, he attacked the news media for having organized a "massacre" of the Socreds through its coverage — or lack of it.

Despite Roy's gutsy speech, the mood was sombre in a large bar-salon in St. Georges-de-Beauce, 85 kilometres southeast of Quebec [illegible] about 100 supporters gathered.

Marcel Drouin, a farmer from nearby St. Victor who was sitting with his wife while Roy spoke, seemed sad about the election result. "It hurts," Drouin said, "because he's a guy we know well who has always worked for the common man."

Rhinos trample minor opposition

It is not yet the Year of the Rhino, but they sure gave a few people a charge.

The Parti Rhinoceros (as it was officially unofficially titled) didn't win any seats Monday, but in the four Vancouver Island ridings where they herded candidates they trampled other minor party opposition, mostly Communists or Marxist-Leninists.

Rhinos did well in other parts of the country as well.

Sonia (Chatouille) Cote, a confessed clown, came second in the Montreal riding of Laurier. When the counting stopped Monday night, she had 3,039 votes, about 12,000 behind Liberal David Berger but well ahead of the third-place NDP candidate and fourth-place Tory.

In Calgary, a Rhino candidate had more than 1,000 votes, nearly three times more than the Social Credit candidate.

Frank (Teepee Red) Coffey garnered 583 votes in Nanaimo-Alberni, enough for fourth spot in the six-way race. Communist Gary Swann got 173 and Marxist-Leninist Allan Bezanson received only 71.

So much for the revolution.

Only Rhino Robert Maddocks in Esquimalt-Saanich finished last, but his 551 votes were nothing to sneeze at.

In the same riding, Independent Philip Ney was the only candidate outside a major party to best the Rhinos where they ran on the Island.

Louis (Crowbird) Lesosky [illegible] names have been incorrectly reported on various occasions as Cowbird, Lososky or Lesosk), piled up 442 votes in Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands, burying Communist Ernie Knott in Rhino dust.

It's just as well Lesosky didn't win. In his campaign he promised that if he did win he'd demand an immediate recount. And if he was still a winner, he'd resign.

Victoria Rhino Kirk Higgins got one less vote than Lesosky, but that was a lot more than Marxist-Leninist Dorothy Ratzlaff, who collected 47.

The cockeyed party with the thick hide, launched in Quebec in the 1960s, fielded 121 candidates. Sixty-seven of them ran in Quebec and the rest were strewn around all the other provinces except the island ones — Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

Jean-Guy Montpetit, party candidate in Montreal-St. Henri-Westmount, noted the growing similarity between his Rhino herd and the Liberals.

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was up sharply in active mid-session trading today.

Trading in shares of Union Gas Ltd., which was halted at the opening, resumed at noon and by 1 p.m. class A stock was up ⅛ to $10⅝.

The company said its proposed sale of synthetic natural gas to a U.S. company was not approved because of a increase in the Canadian export price of gas.

Among industrials, Gulf Canada gained 2 to $143½, Alberta Energy Co. 1⅞ to $47⅛, Aquitaine of Canada 1¾ to $49, BP Canada 1½ to $42¼ and Turbo Resources A 1¼ to $21¼.

Seagram Co. lost 2 to $54½, Imperial Oil B 1½ to $45⅜, Bow Valley Industries 1 to $54½, Moore Corp. ⅝ to $36½ and Inco ⅛ to $34¾.

Teck Corp. B rose 2½ to $37½, McIntyre Mines 2 to $92½ and Teck Corp. A 1½ to $37½. Dome Mines fell 1 to $78 and Coin Lake Gold Mines three cents to 42 cents.

Oakwood Petroleums advanced 1⅝ to $21½, Ram Petroleums 1⅛ to $20½ and North Canadian Oils 1 to $25. Canada Southern Petroleum dropped 1⅛ to $25⅜ and Coseka Resources ¼ to $25½.

Vancouver

Prices were up in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 11:01 a.m. PST was 4,652,506 shares.

Of stocks traded, 221 advanced, 116 declined and 168 remained steady.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, remaining steady at $7¾ on 104,025 shares and Taro Industries rose .10 to $4.10 on 5,900. Ardiem Industrial Corp. remained unchanged at .22 on 2,000 and Renn Industries gained .15 to $1.75 on 1,700. Daon Development Corp. dropped ⅛ to $6¾ and Proflex Ltd. remained unchanged at .26.

Amflo Petroleum rose .60 to $3.50 on 99,100 and Hecate Gold Corp. was up .11 to $1.51 on 97,828. Marge Enterprises gained .17 to .65 and Colby Mines Ltd. rose .45 to $3.70.

New York

Stock prices dropped sharply today as the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board warned that inflation may increase and as major banks raised their prime lending rates.

Volcker, the chairman of the Board, told a Congressional hearing inflation "could well accelerate in the first quarter of 1980 in part because of higher oil prices."

Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third largest, raised its prime lending rate to 15¾ per cent — matching the previous record high — and many other banks joined in the boost.

Volcker told the House Banking Committee the Reserve is determined to slow the growth of the U.S. money supply as a way of fighting inflation. Wholesale prices rose 1.6 per cent in January in the worst one-month move in five years.

Gulf was down ⅜ to $44⅜, Texaco slipped ¾ to $37⅛ and Exxon fell 1½ to $62½. International Business Machines fell ⅞ to $66¾ and American Telephone and Telegraph dropped ⅜ to $50½.

London

The London stock market was mixed near the close of quiet trading today.

The Financial Times index was unchanged at 463.

Industrials and golds were mixed. Banks firmed.

Canadian stocks were firmer.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were lower in moderate pre-election trading on the Canadian bond market Monday.

The short end of the market fell 20 cents. Mid-, long-term, provincial and corporate issues dropped one point.

Day-to-day money was available at 14 per cent.

The market continued last week's atmosphere of turbulence, apprehension and confusion, an analyst at Levesque, Beaubien Inc. said.

Dealers said the disarray began almost immediately with accounts sitting on the sidelines, awaiting election results before formulating new investment plans.

Dividends

Denison Mines Ltd., 35 cents, March 14, record Feb. 29.

Gibraltar Mines Ltd., 35 cents, plus an extra of 40 cents, March 24, record March 7.

Nu-West Group Ltd., 8¾ per cent pfd., 43.75 cents; 8.85 per cent pfd., 44.25 cents; nine per cent pfd., 45 cents; all payable March 31, record March 10.

MacBlo withdrawing from European group

VANCOUVER (UPC) — MacMillan Bloedel has announced it is withdrawing from the Groupement Europeen de la Cellulose, the Common Market's largest producer of market pulp.

Wilhelm Peppler, chairman of the pulp and paper giant's European operations, said in a statement the withdrawal from GEC would take place "after full discussion with the other partners in the firm, including the French government."

The Paris-based GEC operates three pulp mills in France and one in Belgium.

Peppler cited several reasons for MacBlo's decision, including lack of an assured wood supply, high labor and wood costs and the decline of the U.S. dollar in relation to the French franc.

"Since pulp is priced in dollars, and costs are incurred in francs, the decline of the dollar has caused a severe reduction in margins," he said.

MacMillan Bloedel purchased its interest in GEC in 1974 for $16.4 million and GEC's earnings in the next three years increased the forestry firm's interest to $22.3 million.

A slump in pulp prices in 1977, however, combined with a declining U.S. dollar to reduce earnings. GEC reached the verge of bankruptcy in late 1977 and MacBlo wrote off its $22.3 million investment.

Peppler said because of the write-off, MacBlo's withdrawal from GEC will not have any effect of the firm's earnings or financial position.

Oil exploration begins

CALGARY (UPC) — Columbia Gas Development of Canada Ltd. says it has reached agreement in principle with four independent Canadian oil and gas companies on a $60 million exploration program in Canada.

The expenditures will be spread over a period of three years beginning Jan. 1, 1980.

Coseka Resources Ltd., Teck Corporation, Clarion Petroleums Ltd. and Sulpetro Ltd. have committed $45 million to the exploration program.

Columbia, a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Columbia Gas System, Inc., of Wilmington, Del., will be operator of the exploration program and provide $15 million.

The lands to be explored are off the east coast, the Northwest Territories, Yukon Territory, British Columbia and Alberta.

Kaiser eyes $300M coal development

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kaiser Resources Ltd. is considering spending as much as $300 million to expand its B.C. coal operations as soon as it signs a new freight contract with Canadian Pacific and a new coal price agreement with nine Japanese steel mills.

Details of Kaiser's coal development plans and its pricing negotiations are contained in an offer which went to shareholders Monday.

Under terms of the offer, Kaiser is willing to purchase nine million of its shares for $43 each. The offer, which is being made on a pro rata basis, expires March 7.

The coal expansion plans cover all aspects of the company's operations. The biggest single item is a possible new open-pit mine at Greenhills, about 40 kilometres miles north of Kaiser's existing mine operations at Sparwood in southeastern B.C.

Kasier says the Greenhills development would cost $200 million and by 1984 would be producing about two million tons of clean metallurgical coal annually.

The proposal also calls for the company to spend $16 million on its coal preparation plant to expand annual capacity to seven million tons from six million, and $30 million to expand the annual throughput capacity at the Roberts Bank port facility to 14 million tons from 9.5 million.

The plan projects doubling of the company's coke-making facilities, either by upgrading its present facilities at a cost of $10 million or constructing new ovens at a cost of $60 million to $80 million. Kaiser says its coke plant was built more than 40 years ago and does not meet present B.C. Pollution Control Board requirements.

The price negotiations between Kaiser and the Japanese steel mills — which will become the biggest Kaiser shareholders with 40 per cent of the issued capital once the share offer goes through — are the first since 1978.

Kaiser now sells its coal at $59.60 a ton under terms of a contract which provides for the annual sale of 4,750,000 tons of coal, plus or minus five per cent at the buyer's option, with supply to continue until 1985.

The contract says any price review must reflect the cost of coal plus a reasonable profit, but it provides for binding arbitration if the two sides cannot reach agreement by April 1.

Freight charged on the coal now is $11.92 a short ton for delivery up to five million tons a year, plus or minus 10 per cent, until 1985.

Kaiser says the freight price contract will be reviewed in relation to the new coal price.

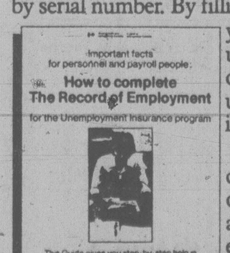
Help us control Unemployment Insurance costs.

Employers and personnel/payroll people – you can help us control unemployment insurance costs. How? By completing the Record of Employment form more accurately.

There are more than 650,000 employers in Canada. That's why even minor inaccuracies can add up to a lot. Last year, due to inaccuracies on the Record, there were over $100 million in unemployment insurance overpayments.

To help improve accuracy, we have introduced a new Record of Employment form. It is more detailed. And it is closely controlled by serial number. By filling it in accurately, you will help prevent underpayment or overpayment of unemployment insurance claims.



Important facts for personnel and payroll people:

This Guide gives you step-by-step help in completing the Record of Employment correctly
Canada

Use this guide to help us eliminate inaccuracies on the Record of Employment.

A guide, "How to complete the Record of Employment," is available to all employers. And we have instructed the people at Canada Employment Centres to pay special attention to your requests for information.

You can help us by ensuring the Record of Employment is completed accurately. Please make certain your personnel/payroll people understand the importance of the Record of Employment. It is the most important form in Canada's unemployment insurance program. It's so important, in fact, that prompt and accurate completion of the Record of Employment is a legal requirement.

If all Canadian employers help in this effort, we can improve control of Canada's unemployment insurance program.

Boucher gets skating silver

Times News Services

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. — Gaeten Boucher won Canada's first silver medal of the Winter Olympics today when he finished second to Eric Heiden of the United States in the men's 1,000-metre speed skating event.

The 21-year-old Boucher, from Ste. Foy, Que., was paired with Heiden in the first race of the competition and skated a strong race in finishing 1.5 seconds behind the amazing American.

Meanwhile, Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden captured the gold medal in the men's giant slalom with a total time that was three quarters of a second faster than his closest competition.

Heiden's gold medal was his third of the Olympics as he shoots for a sweep of the five men's speed skating events. His time of one minute, 15.18 seconds was an Olympic record, breaking the mark of 1:19.32 set four years ago by Peter Mueller of the U.S. at Innsbruck.

Boucher's time was 1:16.68 as he became Canada's second medallist here. Steve Podborski of Toronto won a bronze in the men's downhill ski race Thursday.

Two skaters — Frode Roenning of Norway and Vladimir Lobanov of the Soviet Union — tied for the bronze medal in 1:16.91.

The race was run under much warmer conditions than previous events and Boucher said the ice was hard despite the one-degree temperature at race time. He said the brisk wind wasn't a factor, although he felt it during the last 200 metres.

"I was going for the silver because Heiden has beaten my time by at least two seconds all year," said Boucher later. "That's the closest I've come.

"I was just hoping for an excellent race and that he would have, maybe, a mediocre race so I would get closer."

Boucher said he was happy to be paired with Heiden rather than any of the other racers, especially Mueller, who gives the Canadian trouble psychologically.

"When I heard I was in the first two I wasn't too happy because you don't know what the ice is like and how fast you're going to skate," he said. "When I heard I was with Heiden, I said that's the best pair to be.

"If there's one guy who should give you a good race, it's him. If he beats you it means you should end up no worse than fifth or sixth. I was really happy to be with him."

Boucher had a false start at the top of the race, but said he wasn't as nervous as he was in the 500-metre sprint Friday when he finished eighth.

Heiden led the entire race.

"The ice was fast, a good grip, good ice," Boucher said. "This had to be my best race because the 1,000 is usually my best race.

"I have the speed and I have the endurance to hold the last lap. I'm a good technical skater so usually in the 1,000 I just think about it before the race. I knew it would be a good race if I kept skating and didn't rush it.

"Now that I have a medal here, I think I have a chance in the 1,500."

Heiden's time was well off his pending world record of 1.13.60 set last month in Davos, Switzerland, during the U.S. Olympic team trials.

Boucher gave Heiden a congratulatory handshake on the backstretch as the racers coasted around the track to the roaring approval of about 5,000 spectactors.

Stenmark won his first Olympic gold medal with a second run that was a full second faster than anyone else's second run. Stenmark was third after Monday's first heat — 32 hundredths of a second behind Andreas Wenzel of Liechenstein.

However, Stenmark added a time of 1:20.25 to his time Monday of 1:20.49 for a total of 2:40.74. Wenzel, who led after the first heat with 1:20.17, sped over the 1,354-metre course on his second run in 1:21.32 for a total of 2:41.49 and the silver medal.

Hans Enn of Austria captured the bronze medal with a total time of 2:42.51.

On the cross-country course, the Russians were shut out of the medals for the second time in these Games.

In the only medal event on Monday, a 24-year-old blue-eyed blonde, Barbara Petzold of East Germany, won the women's 10-kilometre cross-country race.

FLIRTING WITH DISASTER, Ingemar Stenmark has one hand on snow as he fights to avoid spill and loses time while swinging around gate Monday on first of two runs in giant slalom event at Winter Olympic Games. Swedish ace went into today's final run three-tenths of second behind leader, but charged back with spectacular effort to capture gold medal. (AP laserphoto)

In the field of class, Ken Read fills the bill

The weekend in review and most sportsmen undoubtedly will agree that Canada's Ken Read, who must have been bitterly disappointed at having lost all chance in the Olympic men's downhill when he lost his ski shortly after the start of the race, certainly came across like a class person in the TV interviews afterwards. Read didn't blame anyone, or anything, for what happened. In just a few seconds his dreams of an Olympic medal and years of years of work had come apart on Whiteface Mountain and yet he showed the character of a winner. He took his defeat like a man, offered no excuses, smiled grimly to be sure, but now is busily preparing for the next stop on the World Cup downhill circuit at Lake Louise in two weeks. And, if he can win that event, then he is No. 1 in the world, as he should be in the hearts of all skiers for what happened at Lake Placid.

Meanwhile, congratulations are due to Steve Podborksi for his third-place finish and Canada's skiers have done quite well thank you. And there had to be a little bit of a thrill too for all Canadians as they watched Kathy Kreiner speed to her fifth-place finish in the chilling cold on Sunday and not too far away from a medal. Canadian skiers can hold their own with any in the world and the world knows it.

And a pox on the UPI writer who penned these words concerning the Olympic hockey competition following Canada's surprise defeat at the hands of Finland:

"As of now, Canada, Finland and Poland — none of whom are considered hockey powers — are battling for second-place in the Red Division . . ."

Have we no respect any more?

Sure, Canada took what might be a crucial defeat in the Olympic tournament, but . . . "none of whom are considered hockey powers . . ." Come now, this is sacrilegious and slanderous to say the least. Of course, the fellow is probably from the U.S. and still shell-shocked over the 7-3 U.S. victory over Czechoslovakia. That victory has to rank as the upset of upsets, but well-deserved, mind. And a great game to watch too. On the other hand, now the Canadian team can only hope that things turn their way while continuing to play well, which they have been doing.

And speaking of well done, Jim Shields is one of the proudest parents in our town this week. His daughter Brenda captured the Canadian junior speed-skating championship on the weekend and his son, David, took two silvers and a bronze en route to second over-all in the Olympic men's category.

I can recall several years ago going to the Shields' household to meet the man (a former speed skater himself) who was then trying to keep the sport alive in Victoria and yes, B.C. as well. And nobody will ever know how many thousands of dollars of his own money, not to mention the time, Jim has put into the sport into the interim. Much of the time it was Jim alone who arranged the many trips for the skaters, spent countless hours looking after adminstrative details, training the youngsters and, in the days when government support for athletes wasn't always as generous as it might have been, Jim used to bend the rules a little. He used the family plan to get a better rate on the airlines. Some trips he had a pretty big family. Now two of his own have given him a small measure of reward with perhaps more to come some day soon. He deserves it.

And Stop Press! What's all this — Vancouver Canucks giving up Bill Derlago and Rick Vaive to Toronto for Tiger Williams and Jerry Butler? Sounds crazy at first, but let's see: Vaive, who played one year as an under-age pro with Birmingham of the WHA, was a first-round draft pick last fall but he hasn't lived up to that rating. Derlago was a top-rated centre with Brandon when he was selected two years ago but has never achieved his potential either possibly because of a severe knee injury with required surgery and kept him out of action much of last season.

So one answer could be that, in Williams, the Canucks get a designated hit-man who just might be the key to fit into coach Harry Neale's defensive mold, and Butler, who is also regarded more of a checker than an offensive threat, could also end up being a plus, the Canucks not being particularly noted for their defensive traits.

Williams, it is true, is always near the top in penalties, but he can score goals and has 22 to his credit this season. Question is can he score as many as he probably gives up when serving penalty time? Both provide defensive strength which neither Derlago and Vaive did and, as they haven't been that productive either, maybe Neale felt the move had to be made.

On the other hand, you don't really build for the future while giving up two of your top draft picks. Do you?

And Vaive may be the one to come back to haunt them. In 1976-77, playing with Sherbrooke Beavers in the Quebec Junior League, he was rookie of the year, scoring 51 goals. With Birmingham he was the team's top scorer with 26 goals and 33 assists.

Only time will tell.

Canada wins, but hopes slim

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP) — The cat-and-mouse game continues.

Will Paul Pageau be in goal Wednesday when Canada plays the Soviet Union? Or will the coaching trio of Clare Drake, Lorne Davis and Tom Watt decide to come back with Bob Dupuis, the unfortunate victim of the 100-foot goal Saturday night which led to Canada's undoing against Finland?

That was the $64,000 question again Monday, as it has been after every game, following Canada's 6-0 victory over Japan in hockey action at the 1980 Winter Olympics.

Despite Pageau's shutout performance, Drake would not commit himself to either goaltender.

"We'll make that determination after our practice tomorrow (today)," he said.

After Dupuis's miscue against the Finns, who won 4-3, which saw a puck travel almost the length of the ice and slide under his stick as he attempted to knock it into the corner, the identity of Canada's starting goaltender has become something of an obsession with the Canadian media here.

Pageau now has given up just one goal in two games, that one coming in a 5-1 victory Thursday over Poland. And while Drake would not tie himself down on the issue, he did admit "there's a good chance" Pageau will start.

John Devaney, Kevin Primeau, Paul MacLean, Ron Davidson, Warren Anderson and Dave Hindmarch scored for the Canadians, who outshot their outclassed and under-sized opponents 48-13, including a 23-2 margin in the final period.

Elsewhere in the Red Division, Vladimir Krutov, Alexander Maltsev and Boris Mikhailov scored in a 1:19 span in the last five minutes of play as the unbeaten Soviet Union subdued a determined Finland squad 4-2.

Nukka Poryari had scored twice, including a short-handed breakaway goal at 2:38 of the third period to give Finland, now 2-2, a 2-1 lead.

Jack De Heer, who once played with Lethbridge Broncos of the Western Hockey League, scored three goals as the Netherlands beat Poland 5-3, handing the Dutch squad its first Canada in an even more precarious position than it had found itself in heading into action Monday. Had Poland won, the chances of a three-way tie for second place in the division were good — in which case Canada would have got the nod and a berth in the medal round by virtue of a better goals for-and-against record in games involving the three clubs.

However, Poland is out of the running now and Canada win against two losses and a tie. Poland now is 1-3.

Despite the Canadians' victory, the Polish loss left must at least tie the Soviet Union on Wednesday or have the Netherlands upset Finland, because should the two teams end in a tie, Finland would advance on the strength of its win over Canada.

Times News Services

Imagine a maple tree from which all the leaves but one have fallen and around which all the neighbors have gathered, waiting for that last leaf to fall.

The onlookers know new leafs will bud and the tree will appear strong as ever in a new season. But that one leaf has their sympathy because they know it inevitably must be rejected by the tree.

That one leaf as far as Toronto hockey fans are concerned is the Maple Leafs' Darryl Sittler.

Two more Leafs — wingers Dave (Tiger) Williams and Jerry Butler — fell from the National Hockey League team Monday when the trade winds swirled them to Vancouver Canucks in exchange for budding forwards Rick Vaive and Bill Derlago.

However, the big question in Toronto was — when will Sittler be traded and to whom?

Sittler is the most-liked of the Leafs with the highest community profile. He has 29 goals and 39 assists this season, a mediocre one for him, but he has scored 32 points in his last 17 games.

However, Toronto general manager Punch Imlach appears determined to trade Sittler, especially after they got into a personality conflict.

Williams said he wasn't all that sad about leaving Toronto. He said he felt his intensity on the ice lately wasn't up to his usual.

"Maybe I didn't believe what was going on around here," Williams said as he packed Monday night in Uniondale, N.Y., to fly to Vancouver. The Leafs play New York Islanders tonight.

Even the manner in which he and Butler learned of the trade brought just a resigned shrug.

The Leafs arrived at Uniondale by bus early Monday morning and went out to get something to eat. Imlach met Williams in the hotel lobby afterwards and told him they had been traded.

Butler found out about the trade from Williams. The two were roommates on the road trip.

"I have no bad feelings," Williams said. "I don't give a damn if they traded me for a box of tape."

In games Monday, Detroit Red Wings plummeted into last place in the Norris Division by losing to Los Angeles Kings 4-2 while Hartford Whalers were beating New York Rangers 6-4 and Minnesota North Stars were whipping Quebec Nordiques 6-2.

Flora survives early troubles

Times News Services

Defending Canadian champion Flora Martin of Victoria received a fright in the first round of the British Columbia senior women's curling championships at Hollyburn Country Club in West Vancouver Monday before rallying to win her opening game from Kay Gable of Prince George 5-4.

Martin, trailing 3-0 after six ends, scored a single in the seventh, gave one back to Gable on the eighth, then stole three on the ninth to get even and one on the 10th for the victory.

Martin had a bye in the first round.

Connie Barker of North Vancouver is leading the competition 2-0. Barker defeated Shirley MacDonald of Dawson Creek 8-5 and Pearl Hiebert of Williams Lake 11-4.

Hiebert defeated Marg Johnston of Nanaimo 7-6. Shirley Hawke of White Rock lost both her games.

At Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Ontario skip John Kawaja remained cautiously optimistic despite two lopsided victories, a 4-0 record and first place after four draws at the Canadian junior men's championship.

"Tuesday is our big day," Kawaja said in reference to games against Manitoba and Quebec following Ontario's 9-2 eight-end win over New Brunswick in the fourth draw. Ontario defeated Yukon-Northwest Territories 10-5 in the first draw.

Stacey Coomber's Nanaimo rink, representing B.C., won two games to keep alive in the tournament. Coomber defeated Prince Edward Island 9-5 and Newfoundland 5-4. Coomber is 2-2.

Martin was super

Timing is so important in gymnastics — as every gymnast well knows.

Reeve Martin of Victoria timed things so well on the weekend that he shocked Canada's Olympic team member Owen Walstrom and strolled off with the top award as over-all champion in the annual Port Alberni Invitational gymnastics meet.

It was quite a performance by the 20-year-old protege of former Canadian national coach John Herb, who runs the Victoria Gymnastics School. He won the side horse, the high bar and parallel bar events and was third in both the vault and the floor exercises.

Although Martin hasn't done much before this locally, it wasn't his first taste of success. Last year in Holland he placed second over-all in a major meet.

Still, coach Herb didn't think he stood a chance of beating Walstrom, who came from Vancouver and was also a student of Herb for four years before moving to Port Alberni last year.

"I thought he wasn't able to beat Walstrom even when he was fit and well and Reeve had been sick with a cold," Herb explains. "But he put everything together, just super . . . and it was a nice surprise."

The timing was also just right as Martin will compete next week in the Olympic selection meet in Toronto when once again he'll run up against Walstrom. As well as Martin, Herb will have Dave Bibby, last year's provincial senior champion, at the selection meet.

Tonight in sports

Victoria Cougars dominate the local sports spotlight tonight.

Cougars have a chance to climb within one point of Western Division-leading Portland Winter Hawks while facing Seattle Breakers in a Western Hockey League game at 8 in Memorial Arena.

In other local hockey action, Saanich Braves face Juan de Fuca Gulls in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" League game at 7:30 in Pearkes Arena.

The remainder of local sports action centres around basketball.

In intercollegiate exhibitions, University of Victoria Vikettes tackle Simon Fraser University Clanswomen in a game at 6:30 and UVic Vikings and Clansmen meet in a men's game at 8.

St. Michael's University School pays a visit to Reynolds for a Greater Victoria High School Boys' "A" League sudden-death playoff at 7:30.

At 8, Victoria is at Mt. Douglas, Oak Bay at Belmont and Spectrum at Parkland in Greater Victoria High School Boys' "AA" League games.

And, Vidalin Construction meets UVic Jayvees at 9 in a Victoria Senior "B" Women's League playoff tussle.

On television, coverage of the Winter Olympic Games still commands viewer attention.

Channel 8 continues coverage at 5 with a wrap-up feature at 11:45.

On Channel 2, telecasting begins at 7 with a highlight of the day's competition at 11:45.

Channel 4 begins coverage at 8 with special features and highlights at 11:30.

Will McCormack stable open door to Rutledge?

Frank Milne came to Victoria to seek out hockey players but may wind up adding a golfer to the sports stable run by Mark McCormack.

You have heard of McCormack. He's the one who took Arnold Palmer's winnings and, on behalf of the great one, parlayed the various sums into millions. Not to mention corporations, endorsements and other lucrative business dealings.

Through his International Management Group, McCormack also has been helpful in directing other golfers such as Gary Player, Nancy Lopez, Laura Baugh-Dent and Hale Irwin; tennis stars Bjorn Borg, Vitas Gerulaitis, Virginia Wade and Evonne Goolagong; skiers Jean-Claude Killy and Rosi Mittermaier, and hockey players Stan Mikita, Danny Gare, Reg Leach, Barry Beck, Al MacAdam, Rick Blight and Victoria's Mel Bridgman. The direction, generally, is towards Easy Street.

Now, opportunity may be knocking for Jim Rutledge, the 20-year-old Victorian who won the B.C. Open last year at Glen Meadows.

Milne has fired in his recommendation and Rutledge said Monday he is very interested and is waiting to hear from IMG's golf expert.

"People know McCormack as Palmer's business manager," said Milne. "Many think he comes in, picks out a big name and stops there. But it is not just from the top end. McCormack spends a great deal of money in developing young golfers . . . like Rutledge. Some work out, some don't.

"IMG sponsors a lot of young pros on the European tour, or one in South America. Palmer owns a course in Florida with a teaching pro everybody comes to see, and that's where the young pros start out."

Milne, who played briefly with the old pro Cougars, concerns himself with hockey. He started his own agency. It grew so much Milne decided he needed help, especially in legal and tax areas. That's when he decided to join forces with IMG.

Milne came to Victoria specifically to "talk" to some of the Cougars who will be drafted this summer.

"I may wind up with someone, and again I may not. I lose a lot of players because I have to be honest with them. I can promise them a tryout (with a pro team) but not the moon. The players are the ones who put on the uniforms. If they don't perform, then I can't negotiate a fat contract.

"Some guys in our business make all sorts of promises and as far as I'm concerned, they give all agents a bad name."

Speaking of agents, in hockey, the big buzz is the departure of some big names from the stable of Alan Eagleson, acknowledged as "the man" in the handling game.

The big shock was Bobby Orr's divorce from Eagleson several weeks ago. Gare, Ric Seiling, Phil Russell, Mark Lofthouse, Jeff Bandura and Ron Duguay are others who have flown out of the Eagle's nest.

Milne said he did not know the reasons but his smile was not very convincing.

"All I can say is that Orr and Gare are two of the easiest guys you could ever handle. If you can't handle those two, there may be a reason. You would have to ask Eagleson. Don't ask me."

Victoria lifter in women's world

Rhonda Peterson of Victoria has been selected to the Canadian women's powerlifting team to compete in the world championships at Lowell University, Massachusettes on May 3 and 4.

Twenty-one-year-old Rhonda is an air training technician in the Canadian Armed Forces based at Camp Borden in Ontario where she is coached in weighlifting by Randy Portman.

Powerlifting, which consists of three lifts — squat, bench press and dead lift — has been around for a few years but has only recently become well known and recognized as a sport.

Rhonda Peterson, one of several women getting seriously involved in the sport in the east, first hit the headlines in Ontario last December when she shattered records for women in the 130-pound class.

CONCORD, Calif. (AP) — Canada defeated Mexico 7-5 on Sunday to even its record at 1-1 in an international water polo tournament.

Braves grab title

Belmont Braves nailed down first place in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League with a 79-64 decision over Spectrum on Monday.

Clinching the title gives Braves a bye through the Lower Island playoffs and the No. 1 berth in the Vancouver Island championship.

League-leading scorer Al Cole sparked Belmont, which held a 40-37 lead at half time, with 17 points while Mark Haas and Bob Ekstrom added 14 each. Rob Crabbe set the pace for Spectrum with 22 points and John Rebneris added 18.

Mt. Douglas Rams, Victoria Totems, Oak Bay Bays and Parkland Panthers square off in the Lower Island playdowns Friday and Saturday at the University of Victoria. The top three teams then advance to the Island championship at the same site the following weekend.

In Greater Victoria Girls' League play, both teams went on a scoring spree before Mt. Douglas Ramblers posted a 97-78 win over Claremont Spartans.

Marina Scott led Ramblers with 31 points, Lora Favor added 21 and Adrian Mason contributed 17.

Donna Carey of Claremont was high gun for the game with 35 points while Mona McIvor counted 22 points.

In a North Island Boys' "AA" League game at Nanaimo, the host Islanders tripped Alberni Chieftains, 76-62.

No game pain

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The chilly, rainy weather plaguing the $300,000 Tucson Open golf tournament has meant a pain in the back for Jim Colbert, but it sure hasn't hurt his game.

Colbert, after visiting a chiropractor in the morning, shot a seven-under-par 66 Monday to go 19-under for three rounds of the tournament. He took a commanding seven-stroke lead into today's final 18-holes, which was two days late because rain delayed completion of the opening round until Saturday.

A group of four — defending champion Bruce Lietzke, Tom Purtzer, Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man. and Dave Barr of Kelowna — was tied for second at 207 after 54 holes over the 7,095-yard, par-73 Tucson course.

The 38-year-old Colbert, in his 15th year on the PGA tour, said he decided while practicing early Monday morning that he'd better pay a visit to the chiropractor, who had already treated him on Saturday.

Explaining his back ailment, which hampered him during lackluster years on the tour in 1977 and 1978, Colbert said: "It's just spasms of some kind. I'm pretty muscular and I just get these spasms."

Colbert tried to make it clear that he wasn't complaining about the back or making excuses.

Robinson selected 'best boxer'

ALTURAS, Calif. — Gary Robinson led a winning charge by five Victoria boxers at an international tournament last weekend.

The 139-pounder, who boxes for Victoria Athletics, earned a decision over Thurmon Dressler and was voted "best boxer" of the tourney.

Four members of the Victoria Jaycees — Paul Deluca (65 pounds), Dean Deluca (60 pounds), Tom Johnson (165 pounds) and David Clark (100 pounds) — also collected victories.

Duncan team takes title from Scorpions

Allenby Ford of Duncan turned on the defending champions in the men's final and Vancouver Chibis captured the women's title in the B.C. senior "B" volleyball championships held at the University of Victoria's McKinnon Gymnasium during the weekend.

The Duncan squad defeated Victoria Scorpions 3-2 in the two-hour men's final.

Camosun College finished third and Nooksak placed fourth in the six-team field.

Chibis defeated Happy Girl Cleaners, also of Vancouver, in the women's final. Lake Cowichan Elks finished third among five entrants.

Trios rout Gulls

Oak Bay Trios trampled Juan de Fuca Gulls 12-2 in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Monday at Juan de Fuca Arena.

John Brown and Paul Hughes led the charge with three goals each, Gary Carruthers and Gord Marshall added two each and singles were contributed by Jim Rancier and Lane Crockett.

Rick Milligan and Dave Kjolbers scored for Gulls, who trailed by period scores of 1-0 and 5-2.

Goalkeeper Jay Longpre helped the Oak Bay cause by making 37 saves while Mike Spiteri of Juan de Fuca blocked 31 shots.

Before the Judge

Hans Martin Plasterer, 24, of 4414 Bennett, was fined $300 in provincial court Monday after pleading guilty to possessing 13 baggies of marijuana.

Crown counsel Malcolm Macaulay told Judge Lorne Pearce the marijuana was found Aug. 8 at Plasterer's residence.

Judge Harold Alder handed out 25 hours of community service work to a 17-year-old who pleaded guilty to attempted theft.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Gordon Stewart Howell, 2891 Craigowan, was caught Jan. 14 with his hand in a gym bag, going through pants pockets, in a locker room at Shoreline Junior High School.

Howell claimed he was looking for 50 cents for bus fare. But he had $1.05 in change in his pockets, Mulligan said.

Defence lawyer Claudia Herbert of The Law Centre said her client was given change by his mother but wasn't aware how much there was. She submitted a letter of reference from the principal of Shoreline where Howell had been a student.

"I thought (in) Grade 10 they taught you how to count," Alder said.

He gave Howell a suspended sentence, placed him on six months probation, and ordered him to do the community work.

Having two stolen lamps from the Donut House, 909 Goldstream, cost a 19-year-old a $100 fine.

Donald Patrick Jackson, 1115 Goldstream, pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property.

Court was told the lamps, valued at $120, were stolen between July 30 and Jan. 25 and were found hanging in the living room at 2852 Leigh, where Jackson was living.

He had a conviction for the same offence Oct. 21, 1977, when he was given a suspended sentence and 18 months probation.

Judge Blake Allan sentenced 37-year-old Walter John Brown, 2177 Bradford, to 21 days in jail for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said Brown was stopped Nov. 8 by Sidney RCMP who noticed erratic driving on Beacon Avenue near Resthaven Drive shortly after 3 a.m.

Brown had three previous convictions for impaired driving.

Judge D.K. McAdam imposed fines totalling $1,500 on 32-year-old Richard Stanley Jones, 1610 Dufour.

He was convicted of impaired driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident July 18 and given a $1,000 fine on the first count and $500 on the second.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court Jones was involved in an accident shortly after 9 p.m. on Sooke Road and left the scene by hitch-hiking. He was picked up by Colwood RCMP further along Sooke Road and breath test readings of .17 and .19 were eventually obtained.

Jones had been twice convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08.

Fined $400 each for impaired driving were 18-year-old Dean Carman Niebergal of Lake Cowichan, and 50-year-old Johannes Gesman, 453 Head.

Break-ins, thefts bring jail term

Rico Ricardo Landucci, 19, who has run up a string of 13 criminal convictions in two years, was sentenced in county court Monday to nine months in jail for six break-ins and thefts in Colwood area houses in late 1978 and possession of stolen batteries in Victoria.

Judge Leslie Cashman said Landucci had been treated leniently in past, including four suspended sentences for theft, break-in, fraud and taking a car without the owner's consent.

Most of the break-ins involved theft of small quantities of money and liquor.

Price up, turkeys unsold

VANCOUVER (CP) — Turkeymen cried foul Monday when B.C.'s two largest turkey processors refused to buy the birds following a quarter-cent-a-pound price increase set by the B.C. Turkey Marketing Board.

A spokesman for one of the turkey slaughterhouses said there is an oversupply in storage and they can't afford to pay any more.

Board manager Colin Welsh said the companies refusing to buy are Panco Poultry, owned by Cargill Grain (Canada) Ltd. and Maplewood Processors Ltd. of Abbotsford, now the subject of a takeover bid by Cargill. Cargill bought Panco from the provincial government.

"We are handling it on a day-to-day basis," said Panco general manager Lee Van Kamp. He said Panco told the board the industry could not afford the price increase because Canada now has 45.5 million pounds of turkey meat in storage compared with 26 million pounds at this time last year.

Welsh said because the two processors slaughter about 85 per cent of all turkeys produced in B.C., a backlog of 4,000 to 5,000 birds a week worth an estimated $50,000 to farmers is building up.

He said the board complained Monday to Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt about a possible 85-per-cent control of the processing industry by one firm, as well as the refusal to accept the board's new prices.

Welsh said that effective Monday, B.C.'s 53 producers get 58½ cents a pound for broiler turkeys and 58¼ cents a pound for heavy toms. The price for hens remains at 60 cents a pound.

Tahsis fire victims identified

TAHSIS (CP) — RCMP have identified one adult and five children killed in a house fire early Monday at an isolated Indian reserve north of this community on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Killed were Ann Oscar, 30, Jessica Oscar, 5, Kathy Oscar, 4, Tyrone Hunt, 14, Arlene John, 12, and Edward Jack, 15.

An RCMP spokesman said the fire was caused by an overheated oil stove.

Developers backed McKitka

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Copies of two cheques totalling $8,000 from land developers to the campaign fund of former Surrey mayor Ed McKitka were presented at his trial Monday in B.C. Supreme Court.

McKitka faces nine criminal charges related to property speculation. The offences, alleged to have occurred between February and November, 1977, include five counts of breaching trust of his office, three of demanding or accepting benefits, and one of using threats and deceit to influence an alderman.

Sgt. Brian McConnell of the RCMP commercial squad testified that in a visit to the offices of Dunlop Development Corp. in White Rock Dec. 13, 1977, he recovered two receipts, signed by McKitka, for cheques of $5,000 and $3,000.

The $5,000 cheque was made out to cash, the other, to the Ed McKitka campaign fund. Both were signed by Steve McGuire.

McConnell said that when he visited the office, McGuire, land developers Walter Link and Joe Beck and a secretary were in the office.

In a telephone conversation intercepted by RCMP June 7, 1977, and played in court Monday, McKitka and Link discussed purchase of land parcels in the Bridgeview area near the Pattullo Bridge.

"This'll be made public in one week," McKitka told Link during the conversation.

On June 29, 1977, in a wiretapped conversation between McKitka and realtor Russell Wicks, the two discussed development in the Hjorth road area.

"You have about two weeks on that before anybody else," McKitka told Wicks. "Before it's public."

The trial continues.

Guilt plea in $2.8M theft bid

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former Bank of Nova Scotia employee was sentenced Monday to two years less a day for a scheme to transfer $2.8 million dollars by phone to a California bank.

Margaret Louise Baxter, 32, pleaded guilty in provincial court to attempted theft.

She originally was charged with theft and fraud following a joint investigation by RCMP and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Police were tipped to the scheme when an undercover FBI agent was unwittingly hired to pick up the money in California.

Judge Gordon Johnson said in sentencing Ms. Baxter that she had a high position of trust at the bank and the sentence was designed as a deterrent.

A co-accused, Barry Berenbaum, is serving a three-year prison term in California after pleading guilty for his part in the theft attempt.

Coast Guard vows B.C. improvement

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Coast Guard will do everything it can to improve its search and rescue capabilitiy off the British Columbia coast, commissioner William O'Neil said Monday.

He also said steps will be taken to ensure foreign bulk carriers are properly inspected by coast guard port wardens before they are given clearance to proceed.

O'Neil, in a telephone interview from Ottawa, said he was very concerned by the criticism of the coast guard's role in the search and rescue effort for the 30 crew members of the Taiwanese freighter Lee Wang Zin, which capsized Christmas Day off the northern tip of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The jury concluded the freighter probably struck Celestial Reef, opening its portside and causing the vessel to roll over within a few minutes. Only two bodies were recovered.

The jury's main recommendation was that search and rescue vessels capable of withstanding severe weather conditions be stationed at Prince Rupert.

It also recommended that the federal and provincial governments improve the co-ordination of disaster response services and that the Victoria Rescue Co-ordination centre be subjected to an independent evaluation on a regular basis.

O'Neil said the inquest jury's recommendations would be carefully studied.

"If the findings are one we think are supportable, we will take what action we can," he said. "If there are some deficiencies, we will take action to see it doesn't happen again."

In reaching their conclusions, the jurors gave almost complete endorsation to coroner Hal Murphy's suggested findings and recommendations.

Murphy had criticized Canadian marine authorities in his summation, saying he was struck by the casual way officials dealt with the Lee Wang Zin while it was in Canadian waters.

Transport Canada spokesman Stephen Ryback said most of the recommendations concerning coast guard resources and manpower must be dealt with by Ottawa, which controls the purse strings.

Hotel opposed

DUNCAN — A proposal to build a multi-million dollar hotel on land recently developed for recreation at Pioneer Park is meeting stiff opposition by Duncan Mayor Mike Coleman and Cowichan Valley Regional District Chairman Martin Lukaitis.

The proposal by developer Joe Silva, an area car dealer, would wipe out new field hockey pitches, baseball diamonds and washrooms on 5.3 acres near the Cowichan Community Centre.

B.C. builders take day off

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 40,000 construction workers in B.C. got a day off work Monday. Election day also happened to be Heritage Day. Although Ottawa has hesitated to proclaim it as a statutory holiday, it was negotiated into construction industry contracts in 1976.

FIGHT BACK NOW!

Good news for homeowners
if your home was built before 1961

If your home was built before January 1, 1961, the Federal Government will pay 100% of the cost of insulation materials up to a maximum of $350. and one third of the cost of labor up to a value of $150. That makes the total grant (not a loan) available $500. Insulation used in attics, walls, crawl spaces and basements all qualify for the grant. Do it now . . . more than $28,000,000 has already been given to Canadian homeowners under the C.H.I.P. program. Therm-attic blown cellulose insulation is manufactured and installed in your home to exacting standards set by C.M.H.C. for your safety and comfort. Our expert crews can top up the existing insulation in your walls and attic in a few short hours, making your home warmer in winter and cooler in summer. Hamburger haven on Yates off again

The city of Victoria has won a drawn-out legal battle over a proposal to build a Burger King in the 800-block Yates downtown.

The B.C. Court of Appeal last week unanimously set aside a ruling by B.C. Supreme Court Justice Tom Berger made last fall which ordered the city engineer to issue a building permit to Robert Philipchalk for the drive-in.

Philipchalk, who operates several Orange Julius outlets around Victoria, has been trying for almost a year to get city approval for his hamburger drive-in and had cleared several hurdles and won two court rulings before this latest adverse decision.

The appeal court ruling said that by ordering a permit issued, Berger was telling the engineer to break the city's own zoning bylaw.

At the time, Philipchalk had an option on two parcels of property (the parking lots immediately east of the Capitol Theatre) but they hadn't been joined into one.

The zoning bylaw does not allow a building permit to be issued for construction which overlaps on separate lots before they have been consolidated.

Soon after, owner Logan Mayhew consolidated the property but at the same time the city amended the zoning bylaw to prohibit specifically "free-standing food sales outlets."

City council also made the property part of a larger development permit area which permits tighter design controls on buildings and landscaping. The downtown area east of Blanshard has been designated mainly for future residential development.

Under previous commercial zoning which applied to the property a drive-in was a permitted use. A restaurant may still be built on the site, but not the drive-in variety.

Philipchalk still has one avenue of appeal open — the Supreme Court of Canada — but he must convince the justices there that his legal battle to build a hamburger drive-in is of national significance.

A 61-year-old woman is in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital after being hit by a van at Cedar Hill and Merriman Monday morning.

Police said Evelyn Stainsby, 353 Linden, suffered a broken pelvis and arm and head injuries.

Police said the driver of the van was Harry Edwin Dyck, 3445 Diana.

Fight body down but not out

The Victoria boxing commission went down by a split decision last week at city council but there are hopes for another bout if matchmaker Ald. Ken Sinclair can find enough backers.

It was reported as a 5-3 vote by council Thursday night, after a vigorous debate with the opponents of pro boxing led by a pugnacious Ald. Gretchen Brewin.

But it was actually a 4-4 tie. Mayor Bill Tindall was out of town. Acting mayor Ald. Ron McKenzie was in the chair and didn't cast a vote, but that is counted as affirmative under council's rules of orders.

A tie still means a defeat, though, but Sinclair said Monday depending on what the mayor says (originally he supported the idea) he may try to reintroduce the proposal.

With a full council and the mayor and McKenzie voting yes, the commission would pass 5-4.

Sinclair said several individuals were ready and willing to serve on the three-member commission, which is a requirement under the Municipal Act before any professional boxing or wrestling matches may be staged in the city.

Middleweight boxer Jerry Reddick, who fights under the name Mack Truck, last month asked for the commission so he could fight in the city-owned Memorial Arena.

Deputy fire chief resigns

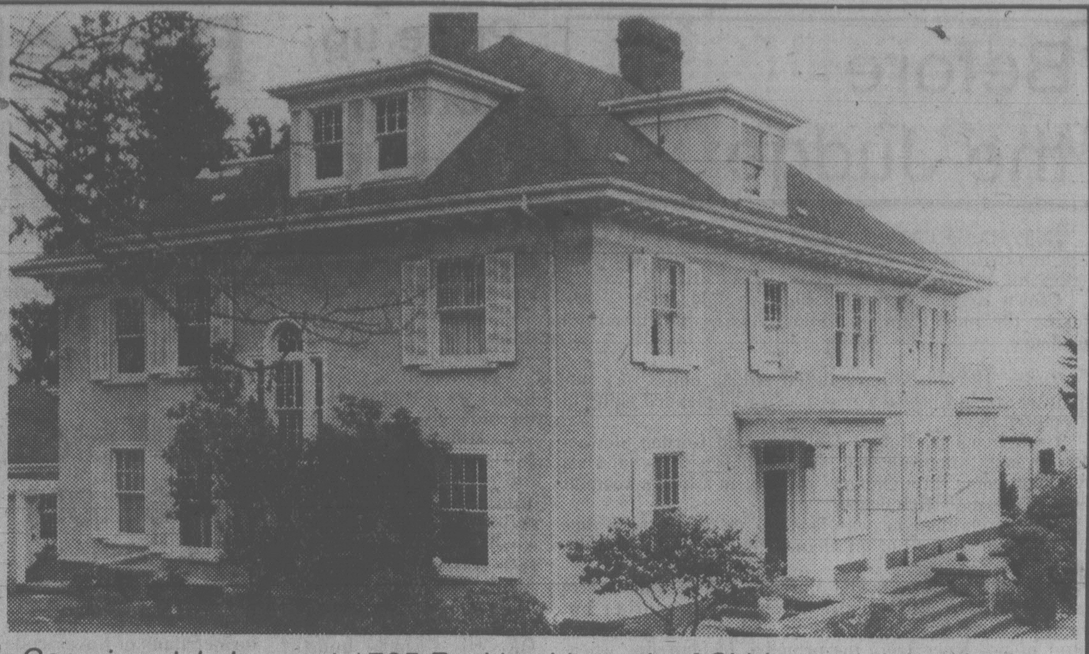
Victoria deputy fire chief Mike Belton has retired from the department after more than 37 years service.

Belton, 58, had been on sick leave since last July and Fred Severson was acting in his place, sharing the deputy's job with deputy Mike Heppell.

Belton joined the department April 6, 1942. He served with the Canadian navy from July, 1942 to October, 1945.

He became a captain on July 1, 1972, assistant chief Jan. 1, 1974 and deputy chief on July 1, 1976.

Senior officers and administrative staff honored Belton with a dinner Jan. 29.



Georgian style home at 1765 Rockland is work of Shirley and John Hayes

Heritage awards made

The Hallmark Society's sixth annual awards recognizing heritage preservation efforts were presented Sunday by Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving.

The awards are given for care in actual restoration and preservation of buildings and to school children in a competition based this year on the theme "history in houses".

Awards of merit for house preservation were presented to the following:

—Shirley and John Hayes, of Camberley Renovations for their adaptation of 1765 Rockland.

They restored and adapted the Georgian revival-style house, which was designed by architect Samuel Maclure and built in 1913 for Charles Williams.

The work was carried out "in spite of the requirements of building and fire codes which make no allowances for the characteristics of heritage buildings," said the society.

—Constance and Foster Isherwood for their restoration and adaptive re-use of 1192 Fort.

The society noted with this award that heritage buildings need not be museum pieces.

"They should be used and enjoyed. The adaptation of this house combines meticulous attention to restoring the fabric of the building with whimsical personal touches."

—Les and Shirley Beach for enthusiastic restoration of their residence at 215 Wilson.

—Dick and Anne Zeer for the continuing preservation of a Metchosin farmhouse at 3670 Happy Valley Road.

—William and John Gidden for an addition to 605 Courtenay.

The society's most prestigious award — the Louie Award — presented for only the fourth time, was given to the Society for the Preservation and Maintenance of Craigdarroch Castle.

The society has worked for 21 years to preserve one of Victoria's most remarkable landmarks, said the society, which began operating in 1959 with a yearly budget of $50.

Cecile Hambleton, a Grade 6 student at St. Patrick's School, and Christa Zimakas, a Grade 7 student at Norfolk House School were presented with Peter Cotton Memorial Awards for their visual or written presentations on heritage subjects.

Hambleton did a visual presentation on the Priory at 729 Pemberton and Zimakas presented a written report on several important heritage buildings in Victoria.

Save trees, too, group urges

Victoria has heritage houses and historic commercial buildings and now the Victoria Horticultural Society wants to see heritage trees designated to protect them from the chainsaw.

From aesculus hippocastanum to torreya californica, a list of about 100 trees deemed worthy of civic protection was presented Monday to the city's heritage advisory committee.

The first is the horse chestnut common along Cook Street and the other is a rare nutmeg yew in Beacon Hill park. Among other species on the list were several varieties of redwood, a gingko in Centennial Square, some dogwoods, a rare eucalyptus at 1041 St. Charles, several elms and two linden trees.

The society also mentioned several heritage areas where outstanding tree-watching is possible. One is Government House on Rockland, with its tulip tree, European larch, honey locust, giant sequoia and cypresses.

It asked the committee to recommend that city council extend heritage designation to the trees, which would mean they couldn't be cut down without city permission.

But city planner Dean Strongitharm noted that the city has the power to designate only buildings or structures, not trees or other objects. The provincial government has this authority.

The committee decided to file the VHS letter, with a recommendation that it be passed on to the city parks administration.

Police probe wharf death

Shawnigan Lake RCMP are investigating the bizarre death Monday of a 68-year-old woman at Mill Bay.

Georgina Miller Orr, formerly of Victoria, was discovered tied to a wharf in front of Rosebank Auto Court at the foot of Mill Bay Road.

Police said Mrs. Orr, who had resided at the motel for a few months, had a rope wound around her waist with one end tied to the wharf and the other tied to a railing.

Police estimate she had been in the water 10 to 12 hours before she was found at 9:30 a.m. by Chris Snape, manager of the motel, while walking his dog along.

Police believe Mrs. Orr may have put the rope around herself and then laid on rocks waiting for the tide.

Officers found a note in her cabin which indicated she was in a deep state of depression.

Coroner Dr. J.J. Wilson has ordered an autopsy.

Council protests obstetrics move

North Saanich council Monday protested the proposed removal of obstetric services from the Saanich Peninsula Hospital on Mount Newton Crossroad.

The council based its decision on a report prepared by Ald. James Cumming at the request of Mayor Eric Sherwood.

The report deals with the Capital Regional District's plan to move all obstetric services in the region to the new Helmcken Road hospital, which is to open in 1982.

The report states the cost and inconvenience to pregnant patients will be greater than any financial saving.

It concludes: "The cost and convenience to pregnant patients will more than offset the financial saving to the government. The hazard to the mother and child is unknown, of course, but statistics state that 10 per cent can be complicated and half of those cannot be predicted and prepared for."

Barking dog saves six

Six persons escaped unharmed when fire broke out in a Victoria duplex early today.

A fire department spokesman said a dog's barking woke up four tenants in the unit at 1319 Camosun after an instant-on television set malfunctioned and started a fire in the living room.

Damage was estimated at $27,000.

Campus hotel cooled

A hotel on campus to train young people in the hospitality industry doesn't fit into University of Victoria plans, UVic governors were told Monday.

President Howard Petch was asked by student representative Brian Killip about a Victoria Chamber of Commerce suggestion to build a tourist hotel on campus.

"That wasn't quite what we had in mind," Petch said.

There had been a change of emphasis, he said.

The chamber now thinks it would be helpful to the tourist industry to book blocks of rooms in student residences during the summer when there are few students on campus. It would serve as overflow accommodation.

Petch said the university could entertain that idea to help pay the cost of student residences because "the mortgage goes on, even though there are no students."

The president said there are almost daily inquiries about student accommodation on campus and the board approved the immediate planning of new residence facilities needed to meet demand.

Petch forecast the worst housing crunch would come at the start of the next session in September.

Immediate needs appear to be for 300 single and 100 married students and a proposal will be submitted by the council's April 2 deadline.

No tuition fees, UVic urged

By AB KENT

Tuition fees should be abolished, a student leader speaking in behalf of 8,300 full-time students told the University of Victoria board of governors Monday.

One member of the board, Rod Symington, agreed with him — philosophically — as governors commented briefly on a presentation from the Alma Mater Society seeking a fee freeze at least until student aid and employment opportunities improve.

Chairman Joe Cunliffe said nothing will be decided on fees until it is known how much money the government is providing the Universities Council of B.C. for distribution as university grants.

A rough idea might be gained following the budget speech in the legislature after March 15, said UVic president Howard Petch.

Students oppose a suggestion that governors may adopt a fixed fee formula, indexing fee increases to university spending each year, a scheme already approved by the University of B.C.

About 25 students marched to the board meeting at University Centre to protest fee increases, carrying placards reading: No Way. We Can't Pay; Say No to Tuition Increases; Too Poor to Pay Tuition Fees — Not Eligible for Student Loans.

AMS vice-president Terry Johnson noted although students had protested last year's 8 per cent fee increase and asked for more student financial aid and better employment opportunities, nothing has improved.

Johnson asked the board to hold all fee discussions in open session, decide on the following year's fees by April and give students 60 days notice of any governors' meeting to discuss fees.

The AMS complained there is lack of communication between students and governors.

At UVic, it was pointed out, a student requires about $4,000 per session while student aid is limited to $3,500. The government has refused to improve its ratio of loans to grants for student assistance.

Johnson said the opportunity to attend university should be provided to students on ability and regardless of their financial resources.

He asked the board to join students in asking the province to make immediate changes in the student aid plan and to improve summer job opportunities.

"We were alarmed when we learned the UVic board of governors was investigating indexed tuition," Johnson said.

Asked what position on fee-setting students would approve, Johnson said: "Philosophically, I think fees should be abolished."

That drew hearty applause from the gallery.

Cunliffe said if other universities index fees, UVic would become a target if it has a demonstrably different fee structure.

He also noted that the the "$3,500 student aid is a lot more than when some of us were going to university."

Petch said he had not received a request to discuss indexing and said he thinks the talk is premature.

He said there has been no pressure from the universities' council, despite its letter which apparently favors indexing.

"Maybe I'm just thick-skinned," Petch said.

"I never took it as pressure," Cunliffe added.

Earlier the chairman said indexing could be a way of keeping fees related to the cost of providing education in an inflationary economy.

Research building plans changed

Planners have changed their minds about having a separate building for private researchers on the University of Victoria campus.

University president Howard Petch said the Discovery Parks concept and UVic's interest will be best served by incorporating industrial research labs in the university's proposed life sciences building.

"I believe from our point of view it is the best possible approach," he said.

An earlier plan was to erect a multi-tenant building immediately adjoining the life sciences structure, which will be built inside the ring road between the Elliott and Cunningham buildings.

Arbitration pushed

The University of Victoria should join the University of B.C. and Simon Fraser University in sending faculty salary negotiations — when necessary — to binding arbitration.

The request was made Monday by UVic Faculty Association president Samuel Scully at a meeting of the board of governors.

The proposal was supported by UVic president Howard Petch.

"I believe it would be good for morale," said Petch, who said he had found in discussions with other university presidents that arbitration clears the air and helps faculty-university relations.

Dr. Rod Symington, faculty representative to the board, said there was a feeling that in the past few negotiations, salary discussions had been empty.

Scully said there is widespread dissatisfaction with the informal system of salary negotiation which lacks accountability and professionalism on both sides.

He said there is considerable unanimity that a provision for binding arbitration would give formal structure to the negotiation of salaries and fringe benefits, although it was realized that arbitration is no magical panacea.

Scully said genuine negotiations would do much to improve the political climate on campus, and noted that in the past year or two, salary discussions had ended in impasses with the university finally imposing its terms.

ROYAL TRUST GUIDES YOU AROUND THE BUMPS.

We show you mistakes to watch out for.

Everyone agrees that RRSP's are one of the very best ways to increase retirement income and reduce current income taxes. But not everyone knows about the little RRSP mistakes that can reduce that income.

We do. Here are some of the more obvious ones. Our free booklet will help you understand more about RRSP's and how they work.

Steer clear of places that don't offer a full range of plans.

There are different kinds of RRSP's, providing various combinations of security, interest earnings and flexibility. Royal Trust offers a unique range of six plans. Our booklet and good advice will give you a clear picture of how your choice of plans today will benefit you at retirement, or even in a few years' time.

Dodge the misuse of cash. Borrowing your RRSP money may be the wiser way.

Say you have money set aside for your RRSP, yet at the same time, you're planning a loan for some other major purchase. That could be a mistake...you may be wiser to use your cash for that purchase, and borrow the money for your RRSP.

You see, Royal Trust offers Tax Saver Loans for RRSP's, and they have one big advantage: Interest payments on Tax Saver Loans (except for loans taken for spousal RRSP's) are tax deductible in the year they're paid...so tax savings can offset a portion of your interest costs. In short, you could be well ahead.

Don't dent your retirement income by putting all your deposits in your own RRSP, when maybe you should contribute to a plan in the name of your spouse.

This can often earn you the same tax advantages today while gaining you some very valuable future tax savings when the retirement income is received.

For instance, if you both have plans, then you'll both be eligible to receive the first $1,000 tax exempt each year when you draw on them for retirement income after age 65. Further, it often makes sense to build retirement income in the name of the person expecting the lower marginal tax rate after retirement.

Pick up this free booklet at any of our branches.

Find out how a Royal Trust RRSP can take the bumps out of your road to richer retirement savings.

Opening lead — king of clubs.

Endplays seldom come about by themselves. Declarer must usually exercise at least some foresight to establish the endplay position he seeks, and he generally applies all his thoughts to this problem right from the start.

Consider the present case where West leads the king of clubs and shifts to the king of diamonds at trick two. Declarer wins in dummy with the ace and sees that if the missing cards are all badly stacked against him he may ultimately lose a spade, two hearts and a club.

South has no control over the trump loser if the spades are divided 2-0, or over the club loser, so all his thoughts are concentrated on holding himself to one heart loser instead of two. In line with this, declarer ruffs a diamond at trick three, the first step in the elimination process that he hopes will produce the desired effect. Without this diamond ruff South would lose the contract.

He next plays the ace of trumps, East showing out, and proceeds to ruff a club, a diamond, a club and, finally, dummy's last diamond. Having eliminated all the clubs and diamonds from his own hand and from dummy, South is ready for the surefire endplay. He puts West on lead with a trump, thus reducing all hands to four cards. Dummy by now has three hearts and a trump, and so has South. West's holding consists of three hearts and a club.

West, with two tricks already in the bag, is on lead and unhappy. If he returns a club, he hands South a ruff and discard as well as the contract. And if he returns a heart instead, the outcome is exactly the same, since South loses only one heart trick. It pays to plan the play.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, February 20, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Doors open to financial opportunity. Those who resented your efforts may now be forced to make major concession. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons figure prominently. You may actually hold key to riches. Know it, be confident, proceed accordingly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lunar cycle is such that you make right move at right time. Accent on improved family relationships, initiative, fresh concepts and renewed vigor. Be diplomatic, not weak. One close to you is planning a surprise — of pleasant variety.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look behind scenes — subtle intrigue is part of your personal scenario. Protect self in emotional clinches. Avoid self-deception by seeing people as they are, not merely as they pretend to exist. Pisces, Virgo natives play significant roles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on production, organization, bringing priorities into focus. Older individual aids in transforming hopes, wishes into reality. Money situation is no longer abysmal. Instead, prospects are ringed with optimism.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You gain added recognition. Promotion, more prestige and authority are featured. Obstacles now can serve as stepping-stones to progress Aries, Libra natives figure prominently. You could complete a manuscript or major assignment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Obtain hint from Leo message. Stress communication, perception of potential, willingness to overcome distance and language barriers. You could encounter a 'new love.' A legal matter could be settled in your favor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Examine areas previously feared or ignored. Relationship is transformed from friendship to intimacy. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius persons figure in scenario. Decision is reached concerning direction and money. Former teacher makes reappearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Forces are scattered unless you attend to details. Key is to be flexible but thorough. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play key roles. Accent on travel, expansion, legal agreements. Partner, close associate or mate has much to say about a 'special arrangement.'

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stick to practical issues. Take nothing for granted — accent on service, diet, employment, promises made by relatives. Aquarius, Scorpio, Leo persons figure prominently. You may be called upon to review, revise and rebuild.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Moon aspect coincides now with significant changes, speculative ventures, romance, ability to imprint style. Spotlight also on family relationships, transforming family dissent into harmony. You are due for pleasant 'money surprise.'

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on security, conclusion of transaction involving home, property, long-range project. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. One who proved helpful in past may once more be available.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your ideas are put through a 'wringer.' Means you define terms, offer techniques which correct wasteful procedures — but some people are envious and insist on 'testing' your concepts and patience. Virgo and another Pisces figure in scenario.

IF FEBRUARY 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, psychic, emotional, loyal to family and you tend to have digestive problems. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. April could be your most significant month of 1980, a year highlighting facts-and-figures as contrasted to your most recent cycle of forces being scattered. In March, you gain access to confidential information which helps you to perceive story behind story.

Don't hide plans, Hydro told

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro should stop hiding plans which will affect all British Columbians, says the president of the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society.

Cliff Stainsby was commenting on a secret Hydro document obtained by The Sun which discusses several proposed hydroelectric projects.

The document, minutes of an April 25, 1979, meeting of a work group studying northern transmission, contains possible completion dates for dams, along with a statement that public reports should not contain "contentious material."

"It's inconceivable to me that, in 1980, there's a corporation of that size and so close to the government that can act in such a closed manner," Stainsby said Monday.

Hydro spokesman Ron Monk said the Crown-owned corporation tries to keep contentious material out of its public reports because it wants to "deal only with facts rather than opinion," and said anticipated completion dates have to be established to ease future planning.

The document shows that Hydro hopes to have a new hydroelectric project on the Iskut-Stikine rivers in service between 1991 and 1993 and another project on the Liard River in service between 1994 and 1996. The projects involve several dams and thousands of kilometres of new transmission lines.

Stainsby said conservation and alternative energy sources will reduce B.C.'s energy needs so that existing projects will be able to supply adequate power no matter how much the demand for energy increases.

"You're talking about some areas which are key to the salmon fishery," and recreation land, forestry areas, farmland and wildlife habitats also would be wiped out if the project goes ahead, Stainsby said.

He said the wildlife areas to be affected are valuable not only for their environmental implications but for economic reasons, adding that area residents make a major part of their income from hunting, trapping, guiding hunters, and from tourist dollars.

Rail pact barely accepted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Representatives of British Columbia Railway and its unions were sitting down today to sign a new contract stretching into 1982, following narrow acceptance of terms proposed by Labor Minister Jack Heinrich last month that ended a five-week strike.

Heinrich, after workers voted 52-per-cent in favor of a new agreement, called on the two sides to improve labor relations on the strike-ridden railway.

"The closeness of the vote is a reflection, in my opinion, of the many difficulties which were associated with the dispute," he said.

The minister said he hoped the parties would reconsider their bargaining relationship to ensure the next round of bargaining will be more positive and constructive.

Stan Horodyski, head of the 350-member Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, said there should be better day-to-day communication between unions and management to avoid wildcat strikes and other strife.

Horodyski said slightly less than 1,400 of the railway's 2,200 union workers voted on the proposed settlement.

He said voting among engineers and maintenance-of-way employees was close, while trainmen, who extended the strike for three days to protest the deal, voted to reject it.

The trainmen, members of the United Transportation Union, said they were upset with changes in the method of pay in the new contract.

The major strike issue, a company demand for reduction of train crews to three from four, was removed from the bargaining table in the Heinrich settlement, to be investigated by a factfinder who will make recommendations by Sept. 30.

Heinrich said he now is considering the appointment of a factfinder, "someone who is very knowledgeable in railway matters, both on the provincial railway and the national roads, and who is well aware of the industrial relations implications and realities."

Horodyski said union and management officials were meeting today to draw up and sign a memorandum of agreement from the Heinrich proposal, which calls for wage increases of 22 per cent in a 30-month contract from last Aug. 1 to Jan. 31, 1982.

The workers will get an eight-per-cent increase retroactive to Aug. 1, 1979, a nine-per-cent raise next August and a further five per cent Aug. 1, 1981.

The first increase will give conductors $12.32 an hour and brakemen $10.91. A shopcraft mechanic's pay will increase to $12.79 from the old rate of $10.35 by the end of the contract.

Heinrich also recommended reduced service requirements for vacations, a five-per-cent increase in the shift differential and a northern allowance of 25 cents an hour for crew on the Fort Nelson section and workers assigned to the Fort Nelson terminal.

SPCA will check up on shelter

The head office of the B.C. Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will check up on the Good Shepherd Shelter for animals as a result of reports about unsatisfactory conditions.

SPCA executive director Al Hickey said he will make two unannounced visits to the Mill Bay shelter to monitor conditions.

Hickey said the decision was made at a management committee meeting of the society last week.

"When I'm over on Vancouver Island I'll drop by unannounced to see how conditions are. I may take a veterinarian with me on the second trip."

THE COMMERCE R.S.P. BLUE RIBBON RATE

TAKE AN INTEREST IN YOUR FUTURE.

A Commerce R.S.P. is more than a savings plan with tax benefits. It's a wise investment.

With a Commerce Retirement Savings Plan you gain an income tax deduction today, while providing an income for your retirement tomorrow. Annual maximum contributions vary, but our branch personnel can help you calculate your personal contribution limit.

MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR TAX SAVINGS.

If you don't have the money right now to set up a Commerce R.S.P., it could be to your advantage to borrow money to put into your Plan. Not only will you be able to deduct your contribution from your taxable income, but you'll also be able to claim the interest on your loan as a deductible item for the year that it's paid.

If you're married, it may be to your advantage to put part or all of your allowable contribution into an R.S.P. for your Spouse, and deduct that contribution from your earned income. Loan interest is not tax deductible on loans for a spousal R.S.P.

MAKE EASY MONTHLY CONTRIBUTIONS.

You may find it easier to contribute on a monthly basis to your R.S.P., instead of making a lump sum payment. If so, you can take advantage of the Commerce STEPS program, ("Start Twelve Easy Payments and Save"). It's a simple way to make "easy to handle" monthly payments. And for your added convenience, we can automatically withdraw your R.S.P. contributions from any one of your accounts at any financial institution in Canada.

TODAY'S THE DAY TO START YOUR R.S.P.

The deadline for 1979 Tax Year Contributions is February 29, 1980, so drop in to any Commerce branch today to start your R.S.P. Chances are, you won't have to go far to find one. Our Bank will welcome you at more branches than any other bank in Canada.

Laugh-in's Goldie wearing producer's hard hat

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Goldie Hawn reluctantly took time out from her new movie to wax enthusiastic about her TV musical special tonight, Goldie and Liza Together.

The blonde beauty, who got her big break in Laugh-In a decade ago, was reluctant because she is the boss, executive producer, of Private Benjamin and she watches the schedule and budget with a keen and beautiful blue eye.

Goldie likes to say she is wearing two hats these days, a soft felt one for acting and a hard hat for producing.

For a girl who established herself as a giddy cutie, if not the archtypical dumb blonde, Goldie is as bright as new paint and an astute producer.

But she hasn't, fortunately, lost her sense of humor.

"I think I'm most creative when I'm pregnant," she said in The Burbank Studios commissary on the eve of her TV special.

"A year ago I was pregnant with Katie — she's eight months old now — when I conceived the idea of working in a musical TV show with Liza Minnelli."

The two entertainers were not close friends but had met socially at Hollywood parties now and then. Goldie contacted Liza who agreed to do the show as soon as possible after the baby was born.

"It was the most absolute fun of my career," Goldie said. "There was no sense of ego about us. We worked together like a couple of chorus girls. Liza is sweet and good and a brilliant entertainer.

Goldie's survival plans include aggressive pursuit of film projects. She refuses to rely on her agent or to wait for producers to come knocking on her door.

It was her company, Rutledge Productions, which produced Goldie and Liza Together with George Schlatter — Goldie's old boss on Laugh-In — putting the show together for CBS.

During her pregnancy last year she was approached by writers Nancy Meyers, Charles Shyer and Harvey Miller with the basic idea for Private Benjamin.

Goldie told them to write a script and she would produce it and sell it.

Despite being eight months enceinte, Goldie met with several studio heads before Warner Bros. signed a contract giving her a hefty salary and a generous percentage of the profits.

"Producing is not an occupation I particularly enjoy," Goldie said. "I like to be thorough and I don't like to be in the dark. So I ask a lot of questions. Much of my involvement is purely instinctive."

Civil war near despite Rhodesian vote

SALISBURY (UPI) — James Chikerema, leader of the Zimbabwe Democratic Party and a candidate in the country's black elections said today Rhodesia faces a bloody civil war no matter who comes to power after the voting.

Chikerema said he had met British Governor Lord Soames briefly this morning and was now convinced the violence that has marred the election campaigns would carry over into a civil war.

"The British have no solution to the violence and intimidation going on right now before the voting," Chikerema said.

"The governor told me he was bewildered, when I asked him who would protect us afterwards, he had no answer," he said.

"The British plan is obvious. They want to wash their hands like Pontius Pilate, get on their planes after the elections and leave all the people here at each others' throats," he said. "There will definitely be a civil war."

"The guerrillas are out of control and the people are at the mercy of the thugs and bandits roaming the countryside," he said.

Chikerema said his first objective would be to establish law and order in the country and he would call on the Rhodesian security forces to train and arm local villagers to "defend themselves."

Concern over the pre-election violence is mounting with only 10 days to go before the election.

The director of combined operations, Capt. Peter Petter-Bowyer, told the Rhodesian Herald that the level of armed activity in the country had almost returned to pre-cease-fire levels. Petter-Bowyer said that if all the complaints of intimidation were true then "we would be way above what we had before and not just equal."

Marxist candidate Robert Mugabe has accused the country's white military leaders of ordering a wave of urban bombings — the worst ever in Rhodesia - in an attempt to discredit his party.

Mugabe issued his charges Monday following an explosion in the southwestern town of Gwelo, about 140 miles from Salisbury. The bomb destroyed a building housing the five major black parties contesting the parliamentary elections, which will be held the last three days of this month.

The guerrilla leader said the white military had embarked on a countrywide strategy to make his party look "inhuman and anti-religious."

Despite Mugabe's claims, police said they had evidence linking the blast to Mugabe's party.

Last Thursday, three bombs went off in the capital and a fourth was discovered near a downtown cathedral. Police said they found Mugabe party literature and slogans at the site of the unexploded bomb.

It was the police admittance that led Mugabe to claim the bombings had been ordered by the Rhodesian military to smear his party's reputation. He placed particular blame on the crack anti-guerrilla unit, the Selous Scouts.

He also claimed the bombing orders came from "the topmost echelon" in the Rhodesian military command.

A day after the Salisbury bombings an advertisement appeared in the local newspaper saying Mugabe would close down all churches if he was elected. Mugabe has dismissed their claim as nonsense.

Mugabe's men have been singled out by government officials as the worst offenders of the 6-week-old cease-fire and a senior Rhodesian military official has said that at least 5,500 armed Mugabe men have slipped into Rhodesia from Mozambique since Jan. 4 in direct violation of the cease-fire accord.

In an attempt to get the leading black leaders to control their party workers and guerrillas in the countryside, British governor Lord Soames has begun a series of meetings with the candidates contesting the election.

Soames has given himself the power to disqualify from the elections those regions where violence and intimidation are rife.

Salvador's militants taking more hostages

SAN SALVADOR (UPI) — Anti-government groups have taken another 120 hostages, raising to 370 the number of people being held in a growing war of nerves between militants and the ruling junta.

About 40 members of the National Association of Salvadoran Teachers took some 100 people hostage in a peaceful occupation Monday of the Ministry of Education's employee benefits office in the capital.

The teachers demanded an end to alleged repression against their colleagues and the release of two teachers arrested by government forces last week. At least seven teachers have been shot to death this year, allegedly by right-wing extremists.

Earlier in the day, some 30 members of the leftist Popular Revolutionary Bloc occupied the Labor Ministry office in Santa Ana, 40 miles west of San Salvador, and took 20 persons hostage, a spokesman for the militants said.

Embassies occupied in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Leftists frustrated by what they call the government's refusal to free political prisoners and improve living conditions for Mexico's improverished masses pledged to continue occupying the Danish and Belgian Embassies until their demands are met.

The militants of the National Democratic Popular Front peacefully took over the embassies Monday morning. But they took no steps to prevent embassy employees, including both ambassadors, from leaving.

The government says it holds no political prisoners. The administration of President Jose Lopez Portillo enacted two amnesty laws that have freed 300 political prisoners during the last two years.

At the Danish Embassy, one of the 19 leftists inside said: "There are no hostages here. The embassy employees can leave when they want to." However, those inside, including Ambassador Vagn Hoelgaard, refused the offer and stayed in a secure office at the rear of the embassy separated from the occupiers.

Vance plots Afghan response with Europe

Associated Press

On the eve of President Carter's deadline for a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan, U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance sets out for talks with European allies today to discuss further retaliatory measures against the Kremlin. The Soviet news agency Tass criticized the trip, saying it threatens detente.

The foreign ministers of the nine European Economic Community members, meanwhile, were scheduled to meet today in Rome to consider a joint response to the intervention. The Soviets entered Afghanistan in late December and there now are an estimated 90,000 Soviet soldiers there, Western analysts say.

Vance's trip, which begins in Bonn and also includes stops in Rome, Paris and London, will sandwich Carter's Wednesday deadline for the Soviet withdrawal. The state secretary's talks with French officials are considered particularly sensitive, since France last week pulled out of a meeting of Western allies in Bonn, saying the United States was trying to turn it into an anti-Soviet forum.

A Belgian source said the foreign ministers day-long meeting in Rome will examine "the whole question of detente" and seek a tough response to the Soviet move, including a possible boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

We'll help you create a job!

EMPLOYERS — you can benefit when you open up a new job for young people in your Business or Farm operation. Provide an opportunity for someone to learn worthwhile job skills, and the Province of British Columbia will share the cost of wages with you.

There are many young people willing and able to become productive members of our province's work force. When they do, it benefits everybody. All they need is the opportunity. You can give them that opportunity in a job that provides a good training experience, and we'll help you do it. We'll share the cost of wages with you when you hire an eligible young person for either a summer or permanent job that will allow them to learn as they go and develop marketable skills. The system is simple with a minimum of paper work.

You can hire the person of your choice or we can assist you in finding young people whose interests and talents match your job requirements.

Here's how it works.

It's easy to participate. If your business or farm has been in operation for at least one year, the Ministry of Labour will help you pay the wages of up to five young people. We will pay between $1.40 and $2.50 per hour as our share of the cost. For those jobs that will lead to permanent employment with your firm, we will consider funding for up to twelve months duration. Jobs may start anytime after April 1st, 1980, but we suggest that applications be forwarded early — allowing six weeks for processing.

How to apply:

Applications for funding are available from any Provincial Government Agent, Ministry of Labour Office or one of the B.C. Youth Employment Offices listed below.

Hudson's Bay Coats and Blankets

A tradition of quality

Our Hudson's Bay point blankets have been world famous for over a century. Woven in England from 100% pure virgin wool to precise Hudson's Bay standards, they're available in four sizes and a range of vibrant colours.

Our Hudson's Bay coats for men and ladies are also acclaimed the world over. They're fashioned from genuine Hudson's Bay wool duffle cloth and carry the Woolmark label. Many styles are decorated with embroidery designs that have been individually handcrafted. Our Eskimo style hooded parkas are trimmed with wolf and lamb skin, while other styles are lined for maximum warmth and wind protection.

The Seal of Approval...it means a lot to us because it signifies that our point blankets and coats have been approved as quality products by the Retail Research Foundation of Canada, an independent laboratory serving and protecting Canadian consumers.

Come see our fine selection of Hudson's Bay point blankets in the Bay, third floor. And visit our Seal of Approval Shop, second floor, where you'll find amidst other fine quality merchandise, our very special Hudson's Bay coats.

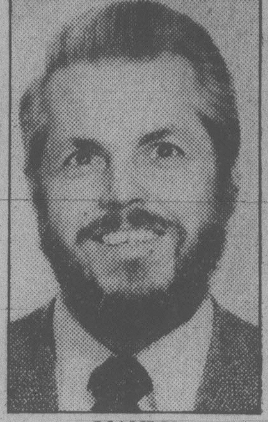
Preacher beats teacher in rematch

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Months of hard work and planning finally paid off for the New Democratic Party in Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands Monday night with the upset victory of Ladysmith minister Jim Manly.

Even the losing incumbent Conservative Don Taylor, a former teacher, had to admit the NDP machine was a decisive factor.



MANLY
. . . only island change

In an interview this morning he blamed his loss on a "really solid NDP organization and effort."

Taylor, the only incumbent MP on the Island defeated in Monday's federal election, was quick to add he wasn't putting down his own organization but only that the NDP smelled a victory early and brought in a lot of people to make sure it happened.

The final tally tells it all: Manly, 22,188; Taylor, 18,245.

The Liberal candidate, Leo Gervais, was well off the mark with 5,187. The Rhino Louis (Crowbird) Lesosky scored a surprising 442 against veteran Communist of Canada candidate Ernie Knott's 87. But Knott was happy. He got six more votes than last time.

Manly, reached at his home at Ladysmith was jubilant.

After three tries at politics — the federal election last May and a provincial election in 1969 — he's at last won.

"I'm feeling very, very good," he said. "Particularly so because we won throughout the riding.

"It just wasn't the north that went with us. We won in the south too."

All told he picked up 4,738 votes over the May performance. Taylor dropped 765 from the 19,010 he got in May.

Manly said the party organization should take most of the credit but felt there were other reasons for his win.

He said the strong anti-Trudeau feeling that was present last May had been replaced with voter displeasure with the Clark government.

In addition, he felt he was much better recognized this campaign.

Then there was the Liberal vote. Gervais' tally represented a drop of 1,884 from the number that went to the candidate, well-known environmentalist David Anderson in May.

Taylor said the Liberal voters clearly switched to NDP.

"It was one of the things we feared from the start might happen.

"If there had been a higher profile candidate it would have been much better for us."

Taylor said he is undecided about his future.

"I guess the first thing to do is clean up the office."

He said he wasn't upset.

"It is one of realities we have got to live with."

He may return to teaching — he was until last May a high school teacher in Duncan — but is uncertain.

Manly is brimming with plans.

He intends to set up new offices and is hoping to work out an arrangement to share space with the three provincial NDP MLAs who represent parts of his riding (Frank Mitchell, Barbara Wallace and Dave Stupich). There are meetings with the party caucus later in the week.

"I want to begin working on our priorities," he said. "One is definitely the issue of tanker traffic. The Liberals have been talking about taking a strong stand. We'll be pushing to see they do. Then there is the jobless situation on Vancouver Island. We want to change that."

Skelly skips to victory by 8,489

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Comox-Powell River is nothing if not loyal NDP country and the party faithful did it again Monday.

NDP incumbent Ray Skelly recorded an impressive 8,489-vote win over Conservative candidate Al Lazerte.

Skelly's campaign aides said they were confident of victory but expressed mild surprise the margin was that wide.

A light turnout in the huge northern Vancouver Island-upper mainland coast riding re-elected Skelly, who handily beat Lazerte last May by 4,600 votes.

Skelly held his staunch NDP support and skimmed votes from Conservatives and Liberals as he racked up 24,912 votes to Lazerte's 16,423.

First-time Liberal candidate Shirley McLoughlin got 9,244 votes and Communist party candidate Sy Pederson 298.

The Rhinos were not running in the riding because they missed the nomination deadline.

The Comox-Powell River riding covers the island north of Fanny Bay and a stretch of mainland coastline from Sechelt to Ocean Falls.

Skelly, brother of NDP MLA Bob Skelly, campaigned for increased air-sea rescue facilities and improved transportation and communication, which made him popular in the largely rural riding.

The election defeat leaves Campbell River lawyer Lazerte, a high school chum of Joe Clark, as a three-time loser. He ran unsuccessfully in 1979 and 1974.

McLoughlin, president of the B.C. Liberal Party, replaced former MP Jack Pearsall but fared worse than he did last time when the party got only 9,910 votes.

Skelly, 38-year-old Courtenay school teacher, polled 22,075 votes last time compared with Lazerte's 17,556.

McLoughlin said the Liberals are undergoing a major reorganization in B.C. and should have a solid field of candidates for the next provincial election.

She expressed disappointment at the lack of federal representation in B.C. and acknowledged the party has a great deal of work to do to make itself acceptable to Western Canada.

'I almost think Canadians had a debt wish'— Munro

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Don Munro is going to Ottawa again as Conservative MP for Esquimalt-Saanich after winning his fourth election in eight years, but he's worried about the future of the country and bitter at the way the Trident issue was turned against him.

He piled up 24,959 votes, down 5,000 from last May 22, while the NDP's Bob Cameron got 19,115 and Liberal Gerry Kristianson had 10,048. Independent Dr. Philip Ney got 781 votes and Rhino Bob Maddocks 551.

Munro saw the national election results as a sign of turmoil to come in the national unity arena.

"What really worries me is the national results. The polarization does not augur well for the country, with 50 per cent of that quorum coming from one province.

"It's unfortunate that the country's been in the process of being divided for the past 10 or 12 years. Now we see it being disrupted even further," Munro said.

The results also signal a return to freer spending by the federal government, he predicted.

"I find it distressing that we should be looking forward to further inflation, further debt. I almost think Canadians had a debt wish," he said to laughter from Tory campaigners.

"I mean it. We've got to tear up our Chargex cards."

His main opponents, New Democrat Cameron and Liberal Kristianson, also had mixed feelings.

At 9:10 p.m., just after Joe Clark appeared on television from Spruce Grove, Alta. to concede the election, Cameron stood up on a chair in his Royal Oak headquarters at 4488 West Saanich Road to make his concession speech.

"We've lost it," he said. But he pointed out that the NDP had cut down Munro's massive lead in the 1979 election by some 8,000 votes.

"That's not a defeat, that's a victory," shouted one campaign worker.

"The victory is yours," Cameron said.

With the B.C. results still coming in on television, Cameron and Kristianson were already talking about next time. The NDP candidate said the 64-year-old Munro probably won't stay the full term of this new parliament.

(Munro was asked about his plans but wouldn't comment. "At the present time I'm looking forward to a holiday.")

The workers at Liberal headquarters in the old Saanich municipal hall in Royal Oak were jubilant over the national results.

"Canada finally came to its senses," shouted one man when Pierre Trudeau appeared on television.

But their local candidate said the results in Western Canada made it "pretty clear people don't see us as relevant."

A Liberal revival will depend on the party's building a strong political base on the Prairies and in B.C. and demonstrating "that it cares about the west," said Kristianson.

All three candidates said Trident was a major factor in Munro's loss of popularity, although Munro said it was a phoney issue.

"It's unfortunate that people should have been conned into believing that was the issue. It was just cheap political vote-grabbing and I think it was a shameful way of dealing with the electorate," he said.

Trident had an effect on local Tory support, but Munro said more voters were probably mad at the party for its proposed gas tax increase.

He said the Liberals will probably reach the same decision on funding Trident that the Tories did.

"Same advisers," he said, referring to the senior civil servants who recommended last fall that $4 million in federal financing be suspended.

But Kristianson, who obtained a personal pledge by Trudeau to bail out the Sidney aircraft company, said it still stands.

It was a party decision, not a statement by the Esquimalt-Saanich candidate, he said.

Trident president Jerome Vaverek was encouraged by the Liberal win, but this morning he was still waiting for fulfilment of the Liberal promise and the vow by the B.C. Development Corp. to provide interim financing if Trudeau got back.

He noted that provincial Finance Minister Hugh Curtis said Monday night the province's money was "up front," but added that BCDC president Newell Morrison and executive John Milroy, who sits on Trident's board, couldn't be reached today.

"All that's encouraging," he said, "but it isn't money in the bank. They're (BCDC) the bottleneck right now. They've got to do something."

Miller increases margin

By MIKE HUGHES

The NDP's Ted Miller romped to an easy victory Monday in the Nanaimo-Alberni riding, increasing his margin of victory by more than 2,500 votes over last year's May 22 election.

The 38-year-old teacher beat out his closest opponent, Scott Van Alstine of the Conservatives, by 7,397 votes. Last time his edge over Van Alstine was 4,829.

The complete results of Monday's federal election are: Miller, 24,287; Van Alstine, 16,890; Cecile McKinnon, Liberal, 7,043; Frank Coffey, Rhinoceros, 596; Gary Swann, Communist, 173; and Allan Bezanson, Marxist-Leninist, 71.

The May 22 election was Miller's first crack at federal politics. He was a teacher and counsellor at Nanaimo District senior high school.

As early as three weeks before Monday's election Miller's campaign workers felt confident he was going to win and by a wider margin than last time.

His main opposition was from Van Alstine, who also ran for the first time in the May 22 election.

The 37-year-old Nanaimo lawyer felt confident that because people in the riding knew him better this time around, he would do well.

As it turned out he only gained 415 more votes than he did last year.

There were 67,000 eligible voters, 4,000 more than last year.

For McKinnon it was her first time in the federal ring as former Liberal MP Hugh Anderson, who was well-known in the riding, decided not to run.

McKinnon, who has lived in Port Alberni for 24 years, was active in that community but not well known elsewhere.

Perhaps because of that fact or disatisfaction with the Liberal party, the Grits dropped about 3,300 votes they won in May of last year.

Conservatives look to Flora next time

By AL FORREST

Defence Minister Allan McKinnon, re-elected in Victoria, was like a loyal soldier, publicly defending party leader Joe Clark following Monday's Liberal sweep.

But his supporters were already talking about Flora MacDonald as the new Tory chieftain.

"We'll be back in four years and Flora will be prime minister," party workers told each other at local Conservative headquarters.

Said another Tory: "I know voters only get what they deserve, but do we really deserve four more years of Pierre Trudeau?"

McKinnon had little difficulty in Victoria although supporters gasped when the first poll from James Bay went to Robin Blencoe of the NDP by a wide margin.

But that lead was quickly erased by Oak Bay results and by 8:35 p.m, 35 minutes after polls closed, the CBC declared McKinnon the winner.

The final result was McKinnon 25,058, Blencoe 17,093, Bruce Corbett of the Liberals 7,145, Rhino Kirk Higgins 441 and Dorothy Ratzlaff of the Marxist-Leninist Party 47.

Blencoe and Corbett came to Tory headquarters to concede to McKinnon and all agreed the city battle had been conducted on a gentlemanly level.

McKinnon was in a melancholy mood after it became clear the Conservative government had been defeated, halting his work as defence minister.

"Of course I'm disappointed. It seems Canadians don't want to hear bad news, even if it's the truth."

He said the Canadian people had shot the messenger who brought bad news — the Conservatives — twice in recent years. There was Robert Stanfield in 1974 when he advocated wage and price controls and Clark this year on oil prices.

"Joe did a good job. He was open and honest. Perhaps that's what did us in."

McKINNON
. . . 'messenger shot'

McKinnon said he would head back to Ottawa and begin clearing out his large office. As a backbencher he would be relegated to a smaller one.

Without cabinet responsibilities he said he will have no more need for his Ottawa car and would probably give it as a present to his driver.

"Well, it's not really much of a car, I guess. It's not that new and it's a bit rusted."

He said he will take a brief holiday with his wife and then prepare to resume duties as an MP, probably as defence critic.

The next election? McKinnon will be 67 in 1984.

"I won't make the decision about whether to seek re-election for a couple of years. Too many things could happen between now and then."

McKinnon made a speech of less than two minutes to party workers, thanking them for their support and urging them to keep their spirits up.

They cheered but a few were crying.

Today's young dress selves

By PHYLLIS FELDKAMP
Christian Science Monitor

When it comes to their clothes, today's children very often are decision-makers.

Yesterday's seen-but-not-heard boys and girls seldom had a voice in the selection of what they wore. Children were victims of the fads and foibles taken up by their parents. Grown-ups saw their offspring as diminutive replicas of themselves and they frequently foisted the fashions of the day on their small children.

In the matter of dresses, adults made an exception to the general rule. Men did not wear dresses but upper-class little boys of the late 19th-century were commonly put into skirts. Why little boys wore dresses never has been satisfactorily explained.

"Source books say it was to protect them from the evil eye, but that does not seem like much of a reason," said Laura Sinderbrand, assistant director of the Fashion Institute of Technology's Design Laboratories and producer of a new exhibition called the "The Age of Innocence."

The show, which currently is on display at the Galleries of FIT in New York, is a serious survey of changes in children's dress. Through displays of some 110 costumes, the exhibition provides a look backward to early in the 18th century and forward through spring 1980.

The exhibition is composed of tableaux suggested by Cora Ginsburg, a noted costume and textiles authority and collector. Mrs. Ginsburg served as Mrs. Sinderbrand's guest curator and she lent many of the clothes seen in the vignettes at the Galleries of FIT.

Yesterday's children had parents pick their fads

A skating party, a dancing class, a one-room school, an 1840s toy shop and eight other scenes chosen to illustrate the months of year have been re-created by galleries' director Marty Bronson and his staff. To contrast with the golden-curled Little Lord Fauntleroys and girls dressed like the drawings in Kate Greenaway books, there is a large modern playground populated with active youngsters wearing such clothes of today's society as H.H. Cutler football jerseys, Calvin Klein jeans and colorful jogging outfits.

"Corsets, corset covers, hoopskirts, petticoats--children had the counterparts of everything adults had," Mrs. Sinderbrand remarked during a recent tour of the exhibition.

Artifacts that date from 1760 to 1860 underline her point. There is the miniature corset big enough for a 2-year-old and a white cotton corset cover, wire hoops and eyelet-embroidered petticoats that would fit a girl of 4 or 5.

"Corset-wearing for children started in the 17th century," said Mrs. Sinderbrand. "Today's young parents are more indulgent."

Sailing, the theme chosen for the June tableaux, was an early sports fashion influence, traceable to Queen Victoria, which lasted well into the 20th century.

"Victoria's children were meant to go into the navy," Mrs. Ginsburg said. "So she always dressed them in sailor clothes."

Frills and ruffles lasted, too, as the five identical dresses that belonged to the Dionne quintuplets and a dress Shirley Temple wore in the film "Little Miss Marker" demonstrate.

Trends in contemporary children's clothes still are related to the adult market. But now, Mrs. Sinderbrand said, "adaptation is not patronizing. Young people's clothes reflect interests in sports and health more than high fashion.

"Children's designers see very well what children want to wear and how they want to look. They are keenly aware of what children watch on TV and who their heroes are. So the racks are filled with sportswear that ranges from wild roller disco getups to jogging suits shimmering with reflective tape."

Wedding rush hits China during New Year holiday

PEKING (Reuter) — Wedding fever has hit China in the midst of the Lunar New Year holiday.

Cars decorated with colored streamers and big double-happiness characters in red on the radiators have appeared on the Peking streets to carry brides.

Weddings take place the year round. But the spring festival is a favorite time because of the three-day holiday, more and better food in the stores and the advent of warmer weather in north China.

In the days before the communist victory in 1949, a Chinese wedding could be a costly event. Prices have gone down under the more austere communist rule, but periodic criticism in the newspapers indicates that some people still regard it as a time for high spending, sumptuous eating and costly gifts.

A communist party official at a factory in inner Mongolia was severely criticized recently for abusing his position to "extort" money from the workers for his daughter's wedding.

Chinese sources say the parents of many brides still expect a substantial dowry from their prospective sons-in-law. The current rate is about $660, they say. Besides the cash, the groom may also have to provide such consumer items as wrist watches, pocket calculators or a sewing machine.

The legal side of the marriage in China now takes place in a registry office. The cost is only a few fen (cents) for the marriage certificate.

This is followed by the wedding reception, which can range from a costly restaurant meal to a more modest gathering, usually at the groom's home. There are often two receptions, one for relatives and the other for friends.

Another reason why the spring festival is a favorite time for weddings is that it is a period when families try to get together for a few days of celebration to welcome in the New Year — which began last Saturday this year.

Getting onto your rocker

the collectors

By KEN RICHARDSON

The rocking chair has been around long enough to make it one of the most loved and enduring pieces of furniture in the household. In earlier years, the term 'rocker' referred to a nurse whose special duty it was to rock the children to sleep. Curved pieces of wood were added to cradles for the purpose. Other articles adapted themselves to the motion resulting in the rocker settee, the mammy rocker and so on. The chair was the inevitable outcome of all this frenzied activity.

Most rockers, from 1770 on, were converted from straight chairs. Hard woods were used both in the body and the rockers. The collector should also seek evidence of end-of-leg surgery designed to accommodate the rockers. Also, if the side slat is lower than it should be, there is a distinct probability it was adapted. A rocker at odds with the rest of the chair suggests a replacement. Early rockers were short and of equal distance back and front. It wasn't until 1815 that the rear blade exceeded the length of the front blade.

Dealers specializing in early furniture. Estate sales have been known to produce some fine examples; auctions with less frequency. Flea market specimens should be questioned carefully.

You usually can't tell much from the seats as rush seats were often replaced, in some cases with boards or embroidered material. A message or date may lurk beneath, however. Reproductions abound. Variations occurred during the 19th century, resulting in the upholstered type of the 1850s and 1860s, the famous Boston rocker and the Windsor, with the high, fan-shaped rest.

A Victorian Boston rocker by John Whitney $255; Victorian Sleepy Hollow rocker in a rosewood frame $335 and a Lincoln Rocker with carved crest and upholstered seat $425. A ladder back, split-willow seat might be worth about $65. A 1780 Windsor comb-back with a serpentine crest rail could command $850.

You were asking . . .

Q. Could you tell me something about Lalique vases? — F.K.R.

A. Probably the most important among Lalique productions in glass. About 200 designs in all. Some of the earliest were made by the wax casting process and are eagerly sought by collectors. Other desirable pieces are characterized by nude figures moulded into the design or applied as stoppers or heads.

abby

Dear Abby: My boyfriend of two years (I'll call him Al) has been seeing a divorced woman for the last six months (sleeping with her) on a regular basis.

When I found out about it, I confronted him with it and he admitted it. I should tell you that he and I have never been intimate because I have moral convictions concerning premarital sex.

He sees me about three nights a week, and we have a very enjoyable, lovable relationship.

What bothers me the most is that he was dishonest with me all along. He says he loves me and not her, which I believe.

Do you think he could really love me and sleep with her? I value your opinion.

Confused

Dear Confused:

Yes it's possible that Al has been enjoying a physical (non-love) relationship with the other woman, which is all right with me provided it's all right with her. She's filling one of his needs, and he's obviously filling one of hers. I'm not asking you to condone it — just understand it.

Dear Abby:

My mother-in-law wonders why she and her husband aren't invited to our home more often. We would love to have them for two hours, but when they come, they stay from four to six hours!

And as if that weren't enough, they hardly ever come alone; they usually have from two to 10 "surprise guests" whom "Mom" has invited. She greets me with her famous one-liner, "Don't worry about cooking, we brought the food."

Well, Abby, there is more to serving a decent meal than putting a casserole on the table.

We don't appreciate being told whom and when we will entertain and what we will serve.

The next time Mom pulls this stunt, she may be serving her guests on the sidewalk.

Steamed

Dear Steamed:

Wouldn't it simplify matters, and avert an ugly confrontation, if you and your husband were to direct your complaints to the offending party? Your irritation is justified, but your proposed "cure" would be worse than the disease.

Dear Abby:

You said, "Parents who smoke pot in front of their small children are guilty of 'child abuse.' "

Well, how about parents who smoke cigarettes in front of children?

Every time an adult lights up in the presence of a child, the child is forced to breathe whatever the adult is smoking.

The decision to smoke anything is no longer only the business of the smoker since his smoking does damage to those who must breathe second-hand smoke.

Carole

Dear Carole:

Right On! That message is told clearly and in greater detail in a booklet, Second-Hand Smoke. It's available (without charge) through your local lung association.

19th Century lingerie returns

By ANNE-MARIE SCHIRO
New York Times

A walk through a lingerie department these days is like a visit to great-grandma's attic. The racks are awash with Victorian-looking nightgowns, robes, petticoats and camisoles in sparkling white cotton. Delicate touches of embroidery in blue, pink or lavender and occasional insets of lace or ribbons heighten the Victorian effect.

Until recently, devotees of romantic lingerie had to scour the antique clothing stores where garments in pristine condition might cost $200. Often, clothing at more reasonable prices meant ripped lace to be repaired or stains that might not come out in the wash.

But the fresh look of starched white cotton or linen started to appear at summer parties as well as in the boudoir. Some ready-to-wear designers adapted the look into romantic blouses and dresses while lingerie designers discovered that all women weren't averse to the thought of woven cottons that might need ironing.

"I don't iron my cotton and linen nightgowns every time I wear them," said Ellen Stein, a designer of Victorian-inspired lingerie. "I simply hang them on hangers and let them dry. They get a soft, sort of crinkly look that's very pretty."

A onetime bridal designer, she went into business three years ago with her sister, Silvia Greenberg. Their line, which is lavished with ruffles and ribbons and often trimmed with antique laces, ranges in price from $40 for a camisole to about $150 for a dressing gown. The prices are high, Mrs. Greenberg admits, because they insist on French seams, hand-sewn hems with lace binding and Swiss embroideries.

Ora Feder has been making cotton lingerie since 1975, when she produced a line for Bloomingdale's. She imported handkerchief-weight cotton and trimmed it with embroidered handkerchiefs from Madeira.

"They sold for $55 or $60 then," she recalled recently. "Now they're twice as much because the fabrics keep going up and the dollar keeps going down. But I'm still doing a steady business in cotton all year round."

Not all cotton lingerie is that costly. Most is in the $30-to-$50 bracket.

One of the ways manufacturers cut expenses is to use embroidered handkerchiefs from China, which are cheaper than those from Europe and cheaper than buying embroidered fabrics. The squares are cut up and used as trimming or in some cases as the bodice of a nightgown or the cups of a bra.

Iris Lingerie, a 50-year-old company that was taken over three years ago by Saramae, a volume manufacturer, keeps prices down by producing everything in its own factories. One is in Puerto Rico, the other in Lower Manhattan.

"We order the Chinese handkerchiefs and the fabrics two years ahead," said Bert Yelin, designer and president of Saramae, "and we order in volume."

The company also uses a cotton-polyester blend that looks and feels like cotton batiste for those who don't admire the look of wrinkled cotton. Many of the Iris nightgowns are $30 and $32.

Hanky Panky, a small company started two and a half years ago by Lida Orzeck and Gale Epstein, quickly became known for its fresh, young approach to cotton sleepwear and underwear. "Our idea," said Miss Epstein, the designer, "is to get the Victorian look to customers at a price." Hanky Panky's nightgowns, made of domestic cottons and Chinese handkerchiefs, sell for about $40.

Henri Bendel's lingerie buyer, Janine Weller, says she's made a point of searching out cotton nightgowns at a price.

"We can't keep them in stock," she said. "It started last summer with some tied-on-the-shoulder nighties from Hanky Panky. We were selling six a day. Then in the fall we had some cotton flannel gowns for $20 and sold every piece. People were buying five and six at a time. Just before Christmas, we had some cotton batistes for $28 to $50 and they sold out, too. Eighty percent of our nightgowns for spring are white cotton. This is a white year."

Saks Fifth Avenue, which has always carried a line of trousseau cottons from Italy, now also has a wide selection of cotton lingerie by such manufacturers as Iris, Hanky Panky, Christian Dior, Eve Stillman and Fernando Sanchez. For spring, they plan to add the collection of Ellen Stein for Silvia Greenberg.

"We ran an ad last February for the Iris handkerchief gowns," a spokesman reports, "and sold out on one of the coldest days of the year. The trend has been growing ever since."

Bloomingdale's fashion director of lingerie, Lee Fabris, says she's been a believer in cotton lingerie ever since the success of those Ora Feder things five years ago. "But at one time you could only get cottons in the spring and summer," she said. "Now beautiful cottons sell in September, October, November, all year round."

Mrs. Weller of Bendel's feels that the women who are now discovering the comfort of sleeping in cotton will be wanting woven cotton underwear. "The little bias camisole with lace edging and matching tap pants — that's the underwear they'll want for summer," she predicted.

Same old soap isn't so

TORONTO (CP) — The sweet smell of success perfumes the air around the Taylor Soaps-Perfumes Co. plant.

Founded in 1865 by owner-president James Taylor's grandfather, the firm manufactures some 30 million bars annually for more than 10 companies — including several of North America's leading cosmetic brands.

But consumers who believe that the soaps — sold under various names, in different packages and at a wide range of prices — are essentially the same are wrong, Taylor said.

Each company ships its particular creams, emulsions, perfumes and dyes to the Taylor plant where the product is manufactured according to specification.

Early in the process, those "secret ingredients" are added to Taylor's own soap base, an unappealing concoction of tallow — a meat byproduct — coconut oil and sodium hydroxide, more commonly known as lye.

The recipe is basically the same one that housewives used for centures before companies like Taylor began mass-producing beauty soaps with such charming names as Violette and Peau d'Espagne.

Two exceptions to the tallow, oil and lye formula are medicinal soaps made from synthetics and soaps with a health-food flavor made from vegetwble oils.

One reason why American firms come to him, Taylor says, is quality control.

"Standards are much higher here than in the U.S. Soap inspections in the U.S. are often slipshod which means poorly milled soaps containing tiny bubbles and imperfections."

Taylor's soaps are finely milled, with a smoother texture and greater density than regular commercial soaps.

Milling, a technique developed in France, is an expensive process that uses first granite and then polished, water-cooled steel rollers to grind the soap. A finely milled soap lasts longer because the density is greater.

Taylor is a down-to-earth businessman who gives short shrift to the often magical qualities ascribed to a simple bar of soap.

Soap that floats does it to attract the consumer's attention, he says, while herbal essences and such add nothing more than fragrance.

In Taylor's view, the most important ingredient is lanolin, a byproduct of sheep's wool that is an effective skin softener.

He also recommends the addition of oatmeal, for its mildly abrasive quality.

Marijuana is harmful — without bias

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

You seem to say it like it is. That's why I'm writing to you. You know the problems kids my age (I'm 16) are having with their parents about smoking grass. They don't understand that it's all around us and that there isn't any party we go to that grass doesn't break out.

I'm willing to listen to you because you have no axe to grind. Is marijuana really as dangerous as some people say? Please give me a straight answer — aside from the legality of marijuana which is a whole other area. Thank you.

Ryan J.

Dear Ryan:

Thanks for your faith in me. You know by now that I am not "in cahoots" with parents. When I feel that parents are too rigid I openly say so. Adolescence is a turbulent time of life. In an effort to break away from the restrictions of parents and teachers, to show their new-found independence of thought many teen-agers refuse to acknowledge the validity of their parents' admonitions.

Marijuana is one of the major sources of conflict. I want to examine with you some of the hazards of marijuana and see if we can't come to a mutual conclusion.

You are wrong when you say that I don't have an axe to grind. I definitely do. I'm firmly convinced that marijuana is a dangerous drug and one that must be socially eliminated if we are to spare today's youth the penalty that they will ultimately pay for its use and abuse.

Cannabis (marijuana, hashish) may appear to be harmless. It is not. Besides the physical damage to the brain and to other organs of the body, the psychological consequences of the abuse of marijuana are similar to the toxic effects of many other dangerous drugs. It is well-known that marijuana smokers tend to antisocial acts, irresponsibility, poor concentration, reduced motivation at school and work, poor reflexes and reckless driving that have made mortality statistics out of lives that were once headed for potential accomplishment and happiness.

Social involvement with one illegal drug tempts experimentation with another. The market for marijuana too closely overlaps the market for cocaine, amphetamines, downers, alcohol, LSD, heroin and the groups of hypnotic drugs. Many young people (and adults) who are on a grass high are more easily tempted to get a higher high with something new. Soon the susceptible ones "graduate" to dangerous drug addiction.

More and more hazards of marijuana will undoubtedly be uncovered as scientific studies progress. Think how long it took us to learn the grim facts about tobacco!

Dear Rev. Cotter: I was wondering about my career. God is supposed to have it all planned out for me, but when will I know what's been planned? I'm as interested in being an astronomer as I am in being on the first women's international soccer team, or teaching deaf kids to speak. I'll do anything, but I was wondering when I'll find out? I'm 13, thanks for your time and I think it's great what you're doing.

Answer: Those who think God has everything planned out for them are simple souls who think God is some kind of Super Muppet-Master. What you do have is a genetic inheritance — for which thank God and your ancestors — that will determine whether some or all of soccer, astronomy and teaching will be within your power. You also have your parents, the school system, the government and the international economic system which will influence whether the capacities you have will have a chance at all. Some thanks is due to God for some of this, but also a lot of prayer to God to keep these largely unmanageable factors human. I think from the way you write that it's mostly thanks for your parents.

Finally, there is you, little you, the you inside yourself, the you who wants to know the will of God for herself. That is the most important factor of all, for that inner you and God have to work out together what, in view of the other two sets of factors, you are free to do and to do best. So you'll only find out God's plan for you when you realize that He wants to take you into planning partnership. Exciting and scary. Good luck.

Dear Dr. Powell: I am a 16-year-old girl in despair. I've had a few sexual relationships with three guys and now I believe I have venereal disease. I don't know where to go for help and I can't tell my parents. They'd kill me! I can't go to my doctor because she will tell my mother and I can't go to any hospital because of the same reason and also because I don't want to be examined by a male doctor.

Can you please tell me where I might go, to some clinic maybe, but where I will have a female doctor so that I can talk freely to her. This matter is very urgent.

Answer: If you think you have VD or are afraid you might have a sexually transmitted disease there is only one way to put your mind at ease. You must go to a clinic or to a doctor as soon as possible. No one will tell your parents because whatever information you give to the clinic staff or to a doctor is strictly confidential.

Some of the clinics have women physicians. You will have to ask the nurse on the Hotline which clinics have women doctors.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am 15 years old and I have a real big problem. There are two girls in my school who always take the guys I like away from me. I think the reason the guys go is because I am a virgin. So the question is, should I put a little sex in my life? I believe in sex, but I'm afraid of getting caught. What should I do?

Answer: I believe that it is important for people to like us because they are interested in us as people, are excited by our personalitiesl and respect us for being caring people — people that can care for others as well as ourselves.

Caring for ourselves does not include doing things that could hurt us or make others think badly of us. If the other two girls are taking boys away from you only because they are willing to offer sex then you will need to answer to yourself some questions.

Do you want boys interested in you only for sex? Do you believe that that is all that you have to offer? Do you respect the other girls? Is sex something you use to get something, or is sex an expression of loving and caring for another person? I think thatsyou should be patient and wait for a boy who will like you as much as you like him. I think that you will feel badly about yourself if you end up believing that the only reason a boy likes you is because you have added sex to your life.

Dear Dr. Levine: I have a good friend who I think has a problem. It seems that when she is around good, longtime friends she acts herself; cheerful and helpful (although she always thinks she's right). Now comes the problem. When she is around people she has just met or known for a short time her personality totally changes. If she is around people that drink or take drugs she says and does things that imply that all she ever does is drink or take pot!

In reality she takes pot very rarely and when she does she acts high, but really isn't. However, when she is around people who don't drink or take drugs she acts like she hates booze and pot and has never touched it.

This has happened just since we all got into Grade 8. Now, going into Grade 9 she's still at it.

Because of what she's doing she has lost two really good friends. I want to help her before she loses me as a friend too. I would talk to her, but I don't think she realizes that she does it.

Answer: Let me make it clear that your friend would not be diagnosed by psychiatrists as having "multiple personalities" — a rather severe disorder. It sounds to me that she has a great need to be accepted and well-liked by the prevailing group. The problem with all of this, of course, is that her close friends never really know where she stands on anything.

Is she saying it (whatever it is) because she really means it, or is this what she thinks you want to hear? As a very important corollary to this, one can ask whether she can be trusted. If this becomes her dominant or only way of functioning, she won't know where she herself stands on any issues.

It's a paradox. Rather than attracting people to her, which is what she desperately wants, she will end up turning off those closest to her. Furthermore, this will have potentially damaging effect on her own self-esteem; she will not be too fond of herself.

Have you — as a close friend who really cares for her — tried talking to her in a manner that only close friends can manage? It might work wonders.

Shirt says it

The 15-year-old Toronto boy lost both arms and a leg in an accident on an Ontario Hydro tower.

He says his artificial limbs catch the attention of many people but the shirt helps convey his own attitude to his situation.

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — When Arlene McIntyre sets out to frame someone she does it with flair.

Instead of immortalizing people in the standard mediums of art, Mrs. McIntyre preserves her photographed subjects on cloth.

She read about the process of transferring photographs to cloth a few years ago in a photography book published in the 1890s. The idea intrigued her so much that she decided to try it.

She soon discovered, however, that the chemicals called for in the old book were obsolete, and Mrs. McIntyre spent the next year writing universities and photographic supply companies looking for information on new materials that would do the trick.

With no results from those sources, she was ready to abandon the project when an elderly photographer friend learned of her quest.

He not only provided her with information, but also with some of the chemicals she needed.

After some experimentation, she decided to enter a photographic quilt in the Canadian National Exhibition's centennial quilt contest in 1978.

Her entry, which won an honorable mention, contained 28 cloth pictures of the large Toronto fair, some dating back to the turn of the century. She found the pictures in a library book and she received the author's permission to reproduce them.

Mrs. McIntyre later received queries about the craft from people across Ontario and from Quebec.

She sent out samples and soon received orders from persons wanting specialty items or wanting to make their own quilts using cloth reproductions of their families.

One of the more interesting queries came last year after the McIntyre family had taken a vacation to Nashville, Tenn. Mrs. McIntyre, knowing that their host was a horse fancier, gave him a pillow with a horse's head reproduced on it.

A few weeks after returning home, she received a letter from the husband of singer Brenda Lee. He said he had seen the pillow and asked whether Mrs. McIntyre could make him a wall-hanging from a picture he had enclosed.

The picture was of Brenda Lee — then about eight years old — dancing with Elvis Presley. The look on the little girl's face was one of total adoration.

Mrs. McIntyre made the hanging — which now is displayed on the office wall of Miss Lee's manager-husband — and kept a copy of the picture as a memento.

Most of the cloth pictures she has made for people have been turned into quilts, wall-hangings and pillows. One man even got Mrs. McIntyre to reproduce a Playboy centrefold.

Dollar stronger

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar reacted strongly in favor of Canada's vote for a majority government in morning trading.

After closing at 86.03 cents U.S. on election night, about the level it has maintained since mid-January, the Canadian currency opened Tuesday at 86.10 in New York after trading slightly higher in London.

The dollar later reached 86.31 in New York and by 11 a.m. EST was trading at 86.25.

TERMS OF PUBLICATION

F.P. Newspapers Limited shall not be liable for non-insertion of any advertisement beyond the amount paid for such advertisement.

In the event of error occuring the liability of F.P. Newspapers Limited shall not exceed the charge for the space actually occupied by the item in question.

All claims of error in publication shall be made within 12 hours thereafter and if not made shall not be considered. No claim will be allowed for more than one incorrect insertion nor for errors not affecting the value of advertisement.

All estimates of cost are approximate. Advertisers will be charged with space actually used.

All advertising copy will be subject to the approval of the Victoria Press, who reserve the right in its sole discretion to classify, reject or insert copy furnished.

All advertisements must comply with the British Columbia Human Rights Act. This act states no advertisement may state or imply a preference, limitation or specification on the basis of an applicant's race, religion, colour, marital status, ancestry, place of origin, age; or sex (unless the matter relates to the maintenance of public decency AND prior approval has been obtained through the Human Rights Branch).

While every endeavor will be made to forward replies to box numbers to the advertiser as soon as possible, we accept no liability in respect of loss or damage alleged to arise through either failure or delay in forwarding such replies, however caused, whether by negligence or otherwise.

309 IN MEMORIAM

CAMPLING - In loving memory of my dear wife Mabel (May) who passed away Feb. 19, 1978.
My lips cannot tell how I miss her.
My heart cannot tell what to say.
God alone knows how I miss her,
In a home that is lonesome today.
Ever loved and sadly missed by her husband, Ray.

HARPER - J.C. (Jean), left us February 19, 1979.
In our hearts she lives on, sadness sustained.
A treasured memory for every remains.
Lovingly remembered by daughter Primrose and Bill Wood and chi[illegible]

HARPER — In loving memory of a dear mother who passed away February 19, 1979.
"Memories and sadness are with us on this day
The way she was will never go away
The love she gave is with us still
We wonder why—that is God's will."
—Always in our thoughts and hearts. Sadly missed by son David and daughter-in-law Joan.

309 IN MEMORIAM

HARPET - (Jean) Jessie, in loving memory of my dear wife, and the many years we enjoyed together.
You name is often mentioned,
Our thoughts are with you still;
You have not been forgotten,
What's more you never will.
Frank, family and children

HAYHURST - Stephen died suddenly Feb. 19, 1974.
Lovingly remembered by his wife Catherine.

PITT, Robert S. — In memory of my husband, who died February 17, 1973.
—Sadly missed and dearly loved by his wife Ella and family.

ROSS - In memory of our Mom, Lillian Ross who died Feb. 19/70.
Nobody really dies when someone is left to remember.
And when no one is left to remember then it doesn't matter because they're all together again.
Sadly missed by her daughter Linda and son—in—law Keith Snelling.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

Fruit tree fertilizing a February priority

Fruit trees are fertilized at the end of February here on the west coast. The fertilizer is applied as soon as pruning has been completed.

If the trees are fertilized after new growth starts, or fertilizer from any other source is carried in the soil water to their feeding roots, it will not improve the quality of this year's crop, but it will improve the color of the fruits and lessen the number of weeks the fruits can be stored.

This is one of the main problems when fruit trees are planted in a lawn, or at the side of a lawn where their roots will go under the lawn for moisture.

The fertilizer put on the lawn every 30 days from April to September, is picked up by the tree, causes excessive growth and pruning problems, and the gardener finds the fruits suddenly going rotten before Christmas.

The recommendation for large fruit orchards is a fertilizer high in nitrogen because available nitrogen is leeched from our soils by heavy winter rains.

But conditions in a home garden can be quite different to those in an acreage devoted entirely to fruit trees. In the home garden a wide assortment of plants, including areas of grass, share a small area of ground with the trees.

These other plants receive fertilizer at various times, and fertilizer salts also reach the area in soil water from other gardens. Therefore each garden owner has to assess the conditions existing in the home plot and devise a suitable fruit tree fertilizing program that will keep growth and fruit production in balance.

In some gardens no fertilizer may be needed by fruit trees. If the need for fertilizer is indicated by general poor growth and small fruits, it is better to use a balanced mix than a high nitrogen mix that could cause soft growth and poor flowering.

The percentage of nitrogen in the mix should be offset with an equal percentage of potash to harden the cells of the new growth caused by the nitrogen. There should also be a slightly higher percentage of phosphoric acid to encourage the production of flowers and seeds, which in this instance means quality fruits.

Young trees, prior to beaing age, should always have this type of fertilizer mix since our aim is to build a strong structure that is capable of bearing large crops.

Since the fertilizer applied in late February must reach the roots before growth starts, it is better to put it into holes about 15 cms deep than to spread it over the surface of the soil.

The approximate quantity to use is one pound of fertilizer to every 2.5 cms of trunk diameter. The diameter is the width of the trunk (ex. 10 cms), not the distance around the trunk which would be near 33 cms. The measurement is taken at 120 cms up the trunk from soil level.

Holes are punched over the root area about 20 cms apart with a crowbar, the first circle starting about 60 cms from the trunk, and other circles to the outer edge of the branch spread.

Into each hole goes a measured amount of fertilizer, possibly one measuring teaspoonful to a hole, starting with the circle nearest to the trunk. After each hole has been treated, the balance of the amount needed is equally divided and added, starting with the outer circle of holes where most of the feeding roots exist. If there is not enough to add to the inner circles of holes it does not matter.

Each hole is then filled with water from the garden hose to dissolve the fertilizer crystals. This also washes some soil into each hole. If the surface is then lightly cultivated it will allow subsequent rains to penetrate more easily and carry the fertilizer salts down to the feeding roots.

Trio dominates awards

There were 330 competitors at the 27th annual Victoria Highland Games Association's indoor dance, pipe and drum competition at the First United Church hall.

But three of them — Jennifer Lindsay, Tracy Curtis and Richel Condie — stood out, sharing a whopping 18 awards.

Lindsay took seven titles, winning in the sword dance, strathspey, half Tulloch and Village Maid, as well as capturing the Jessie Hamilton pepetual trophy. She also took the Wallace shield, the Kiwanis perpetual trophy and the Concord Development trophy.

Curtis, competing in the open under 12 category, won the Sword dance, the strathspey, the half Tulloch, hornpipe and also got the Sheilagh Mallard trophy. Curtis shared in the Jocelyn McDougal dancing trophy and also won the Napier shield.

Condie, an entrant in the open uhder nine class, took second in the Highland fling and strathspey and Highland reel and was also named winner of the Gordon Shield and the Victoria Highland Games Association trophy.

Local Rotaries join world 75th

The 360 members of the five Rotary Clubs in Greater Victoria will join more than 18,000 other clubs around the world this week in commemorating the organization's 75th anniversary.

Rotary was founded by a Chicago lawyer in 1905. The club's symbol, a cogwheel with six spokes, 24 cogs and a keyway, is recognized in 153 countries.

The club is known for its membership regulation that permits only two members of any profession or type of industry to join at one time.

Originally this regulation permitted only one member from each industry or profession.

Bill Skinner, president of the Victoria Rotary Club, said this is to ensure that the club represents a cross-section of its community.

Each of the Victoria area clubs has its own celebrations planned to mark the anniversary but several members will attend the international convention June 4 in Chicago.

More than 25,000 members from around the world are expected to attend.

The Rotary Club is noted for its charitable work in a variety of fields. In particular its student exchange program is well-known.

Victoria Rotary Club, the oldest on the Island, was organized in 1913.

It founded Goodwill Enterprises, has helped with many community services and in recent years, has supplied a considerable amount of hospital equipment and services.

Canada: One nation divided

A sombre Maureen McTeer walks with defeated Joe, as elated Trudeau announces victory

Welcome to the '80s: Pierre

Times News Sevices

OTTAWA — "Well, welcome to the '80s," a smiling Pierre Elliott Trudeau told thousands of exuberant supporters after his election victory Monday night.

Speaking in the gilded, overstuffed ballroom of the Chateau Laurier Hotel, Trudeau asked the 2,000 over-heated Liberals in attendance — many of whom groaned and booed the mention of Clark's name — to share his "grudging admiration for Mr. Clark."

As chants of 'Trudeau!, Trudeau!, Trudeau!' faded, the Liberal Leader said he would seek the advice of the opposition parties during the coming parliamentary session, particularly on issues involving western Canada, where his party won only two seats.

In Spruce Grove, Alta., Joe Clark gracefully accepted the verdict of the voters but hinted that in spite of the crushing defeat of his young government he intends to stay on as Progressive Conservative leader for some time to come.

"I was honored to serve my first six months as the prime minister of Canada," Clark told about 1,000 gamely cheering supporters in the town arena in his riding that was the scene of a rousing victory celebration only nine months earlier.

As the 40-year-old Clark spoke, his wife, Maureen McTeer, stood at his side, wiping back tears.

One of Clark's closest friends and advisers, Senator Lowell Murray, said the result was a shock to the Clark group.

They had expected the election to be much closer.

For Ed Broadbent and the New Democrats, it was a bittersweet outcome.

As the last results of Monday's general election trickled in early today from British Columbia, Broadbent was exultant at the news that his party had gained more seats than ever before — more than even the most optimistic NDPer had dared predict.

But the Liberal tide which had rolled over the country had also deprived the party of all the clout it had wielded in the last minority Parliament.

The NDP leader told cheering supporters at his campaign headquarters here that he was "immensely proud" that "we have won more seats and have a higher percentage of the popular vote than ever in the history of our party."

Western void spells trouble for Trudeau

Times News Services

The East is Liberal red, the West a mixture of Tory blue and NDP orange, the country split down its central axis in partisan colors.

And it all spells trouble for unity-minded prime minister-elect Pierre Trudeau.

In the 282-seat House of Commons after Monday's federal election, party standings, barring recounts, will be Liberals 146, Progressive Conservatives 103, and New Democratic Party 32.

The Liberal return to power and to majority government after nine months of Tory rule under Joe Clark started in the Atlantic provinces, surged through Quebec and peaked in Ontario, before flagging in Manitoba and dying in the West.

No Liberals were elected west of Winnipeg, the Tories took all 21 Alberta seats, and the NDP won 26 seats in the four western provinces. In B.C., the Conservatives took 16 and the NDP 12. The Conservatives captured two ridings in the Far North and the NDP one.

Voting in one riding — Frontenac in Quebec — was postponed to March 24 because of the death during the campaign of the Social Credit candidate. The Liberals won it in the last election.

In all, the Liberals picked up 25 seats from the Conservatives, five from the NDP and five from the Social Credit en route to victory. The NDP also took 10 from the Conservatives, who managed to take one from the Liberals.

The Liberals won 46 per cent of the popular vote to 31 per cent for the Conservatives and about 19 for the NDP.

Although the Liberals started their climb back to power in the Atlantic provinces, where they took the only two NDP seats and gained five from the Conservatives — including the riding held by David MacDonald, Conservative secretary of state — they cemented the win in Ontario.

They picked up 20 ridings for a total of 52 on a campaign that saw them hammer at the damage the Conservative budget would do to consumers' pocketbooks.

The Conservatives held 38 Ontario seats, compared with the 57 they swept last year, while the NDP dropped one for a total of five.

Despite the Liberal strength in Ontario, only one cabinet minister was defeated in that province. Ron Atkey, minister of immigration, went down to John Roberts, himself a former cabinet minister under Trudeau, in Toronto St. Paul's.

Three familiar NDP names lost to Liberals — John Rodriguez in Nickel Belt, Cyril Symes, the NDP energy spokesman, in Sault Ste. Marie, and veteran Arnold Peters in Timiskaming.

French power stormed back into federal government as Quebecers voted massively for Trudeau and delivered half the seats for the Liberal majority across Canada.

The Liberals, much as predicted, crushed all opposition parties in Quebec, wiping out Social Credit leader Fabien Roy and his four sitting MPs.

The Liberals won nearly 68 per cent of the popular vote and all but one of the 74 seats being contested.

The victory was a vindication for Liberal strategists who opted for a carefully controlled campaign of attacking the Conservatives — especially for its budget and policy flip-flops — while keeping its own commitments to a minimum.

Even before the voting, Conservative officials were saying that if they lost it would be because they had failed to explain the reasons for their tough budget and to make voters aware of what they had done since taking office.

The outcome also was at least a partial vindication of opinion polls, which consistently showed the Liberals with a strong lead.

The result appeared to be as much an expression of voter dissatisfaction with Clark as prime minister — just as last May they had turned against Trudeau.

Clark's future as party leader was put in question by the outcome, although he received a strong endorsement from John Crosbie, author of the ill-fated budget and victory in the Newfoundland riding of St. John's West.

William Head escapers feared drowned

A search continued today for two William Head prisoners officials believe may have drowned while attempting a desperate swim to freedom late Monday night.

David William Stevenson, 23, of Kamloops, and Samuel Sidemny El Safadi, 18, of Peace River, were first missed at a 10 p.m. head count.

Prisoner director Arli Bender said cries for help — apparently from the sea off Pedder Bay — were heard by some inmates and staff about a half hour earlier.

Bender said a prison spotlight failed to pick up any sign of anyone in trouble and an RCMP helicopter swept the sea with its spotlight with the same result.

The rescue boat from Pearson College and a boat from Pedder Bay Marina also joined in but the search was finally abandoned until daybreak when the police helicopter and RCMP patrol boat out of Sidney arrived at the scene.

Bender said shoreline searches have also drawn a blank.

He said when the cries for help were first heard, the sea was relatively calm with a slight swell.

"But within half an hour a wind came up and by 11 p.m. it was really rough," he said today.

Stevenson was serving two years for breaking and entering and theft and was due for release in August.

El Safadi was serving two years and five months for similar offences and was due to be released in December.

Both arrived at William Head only 12 days ago.

"They were here such a short time we didn't have a chance to really assess them," Bender said adding that if the pair did in fact try to escape by swimming, the decision was likely spontaneous.

"Inmates who have been here any time know the risks. They think anyone who tries has to be slightly mad," Bender said.

Calif. deluge in 7th day

Times News Services

Relentless rain drenched southern California for a seventh straight day, bringing more mudslides and high water that forced thousands of persons from their homes and drove damage estimates into the millions of dollars. Flooding continued in Utah and Arizona.

As the rain continued, tourists were urged to avoid the desert Palm Springs area, where 1,000 persons were advised to leave their homes. Rail travel was interrupted between Los Angeles and San Diego because a bridge had been weakened by the storms.

By late Monday, at least 24 persons had died because of the weather, including 18 in California, three in Arizona and three U.S. tourists in Tijuana, Mexico, authorities said.

One Los Angeles woman was suffocated by mud that oozed into her own living room. A child in Rancho Cucamonga was swept into a sewer drain during the weekend.

At least 26 homes have been destroyed and another 152 damaged.

With a fifth storm predicted for waterlogged California today and a sixth expected late tonight or early Wednesday, thousands of persons were evacuated from areas ravaged by floodwaters and mudslides.

Hydro hike beats PUC to punch

By JAKE BANKY

B.C. Hydro outmanoeuvred the government Monday by announcing an average seven-per-cent electricity rate increase effective April 1.

The increase will add as much as 22 per cent to the bills of large industrial electricity users.

Hydro moved on the hike before the promised Public Utilities Commission could be put into gear.

The provincial energy policy announced Feb. 4 gives the PUC responsibility for full regulation of both the electricity and gas sections of B.C. Hydro.

Energy Minister Bob McClelland said the rate increase will be reviewed by the commission when it is set up but he will not freeze Hydro rates until that time, as demanded by Nanaimo NDP MLA Dave Stupich.

"I think the commission should be established very soon and there should be public hearings on the proposed increase," Stupich said.

"I am not saying there should not be an increase but at this time the government should block the proposal until the utilities commission is established and can review it."

McClelland has not said when the change-over from the old B.C. Energy Commission to the new PUC will be made.

NDP energy critic Chris D'Arcy said the government is being led down the garden path by Hydro and the new energy policy has no teeth.

Starting April 1 the new basic bi-monthly rate for electricity will be $5, up from $4.50.

The charge per kilowatt hour will remain unchanged at 4.5 cents for the first 550 kilowatt hours.

After that it will be three cents a kilowatt hour, up from 2.65 cents.

Hydro chairman Robert Bonner said the new rate should encourage energy conservation because the "more you use, the greater the increase."

The new rates will mean an average increase of $3 a year for an apartment dweller not using electricity for home or water heating, $33.48 a year for a home-owner with an electrical water heater and an average $96.48 a year for a house with electric heat and hot water.

In addition to the residential increase there are rate hikes for almost all commercial, institutional and small industrial customers.

A small percentage, mostly those with heavy industrial use of electricity, will be hit by increases ranging up to 19 per cent.

Large industrial customers such as pulp and paper mills, sawmills, mines and electro-chemical plants will pay 22 per cent more for their power.

The increases are expected to add about $70 million a year to Hydro's gross revende, Bonner said.

Boucher gets skating silver

Times News Services

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. — Gaeten Boucher won Canada's first silver medal of the Winter Olympics today when he finished second to Eric Heiden of the United States in the men's 1,000-metre speed skating event.

The 21-year-old Boucher, from Ste. Foy, Que., was paired with Heiden in the first race of the competition and skated a strong race in finishing 1.5 seconds behind the amazing American.

Meanwhile, Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden captured the gold medal in the men's giant slalom with a total time that was three quarters of a second faster than his closest competition.

Heiden's gold medal was his third of the Olympics as he shoots for a sweep of the five men's speed skating events. His time of one minute, 15.18 seconds was an Olympic record, breaking the mark of 1:19.32 set four years ago by Peter Mueller of the U.S. at Innsbruck.

Boucher's time was 1:16.68 as he became Canada's second medallist here. Steve Podborski of Toronto won a bronze in the men's downhill ski race Thursday.

Two skaters — Frode Roenning of Norway and Vladimir Lobanov of the Soviet Union — tied for the bronze medal in 1:16.91.

The race was run under much warmer conditions than previous events and Boucher said the ice was hard despite the one-degree temperature at race time. He said the brisk wind wasn't a factor, although he felt it during the last 200 metres.

"I was going for the silver because Heiden has beaten my time by at least two seconds all year," said Boucher later. "That's the closest I've come.

"I was just hoping for an excellent race and that he would have, maybe, a mediocre race so I would get closer."

Boucher said he was happy to be paired with Heiden rather than any of the other racers, especially Mueller, who gives the Canadian trouble psychologically.

"When I heard I was in the first two I wasn't too happy because you don't know what the ice is like and how fast you're going to skate," he said. "When I heard I was with Heiden, I said that's the best pair to be.

"If there's one guy who should give you a good race, it's him. If he beats you it means you should end up no worse than fifth or sixth. I was really happy to be with him."

Boucher had a false start at the top of the race, but said he wasn't as nervous as he was in the 500-metre sprint Friday when he finished eighth.

Heiden led the entire race.

"The ice was fast, a good grip, good ice," Boucher said. "This had to be my best race because the 1,000 is usually my best race.

"I have the speed and I have the endurance to hold the last lap. I'm a good technical skater so usually in the 1,000 I just think about it before the race. I knew it would be a good race if I kept skating and didn't rush it.

"Now that I have a medal here, I think I have a chance in the 1,500."

Heiden's time was well off his pending world record of 1.13.60 set last month in Davos, Switzerland, during the U.S. Olympic team trials.

Boucher gave Heiden a congratulatory handshake on the backstretch as the racers coasted around the track to the roaring approval of about 5,000 spectactors.

Stenmark won his first Olympic gold medal with a second run that was a full second faster than anyone else's second run. Stenmark was third after Monday's first heat — 32 hundredths of a second behind Andreas Wenzel of Liechenstein.

However, Stenmark added a time of 1:20.25 to his time Monday of 1:20.49 for a total of 2:40.74. Wenzel, who led after the first heat with 1:20.17, sped over the 1,354-metre course on his second run in 1:21.32 for a total of 2:41.49 and the silver medal.

Hans Enn of Austria captured the bronze medal with a total time of 2:42.51.

On the cross-country course, the Russians were shut out of the medals for the second time in these Games.

In the only medal event on Monday, a 24-year-old blue-eyed blonde, Barbara Petzold of East Germany, won the women's 10-kilometre cross-country race.

In the field of class, Ken Read fills the bill

The weekend in review and most sportsmen undoubtedly will agree that Canada's Ken Read, who must have been bitterly disappointed at having lost all chance in the Olympic men's downhill when he lost his ski shortly after the start of the race, certainly came across like a class person in the TV interviews afterwards. Read didn't blame anyone, or anything, for what happened. In just a few seconds his dreams of an Olympic medal and years of years of work had come apart on Whiteface Mountain and yet he showed the character of a winner. He took his defeat like a man, offered no excuses, smiled grimly to be sure, but now is busily preparing for the next stop on the World Cup downhill circuit at Lake Louise in two weeks. And, if he can win that event, then he is No. 1 in the world, as he should be in the hearts of all skiers for what happened at Lake Placid.

Meanwhile, congratulations are due to Steve Podborksi for his third-place finish and Canada's skiers have done quite well thank you. And there had to be a little bit of a thrill too for all Canadians as they watched Kathy Kreiner speed to her fifth-place finish in the chilling cold on Sunday and not too far away from a medal. Canadian skiers can hold their own with any in the world and the world knows it.

And a pox on the UPI writer who penned these words concerning the Olympic hockey competition following Canada's surprise defeat at the hands of Finland:

"As of now, Canada, Finland and Poland — none of whom are considered hockey powers — are battling for second-place in the Red Division . . ."

Have we no respect any more?

Sure, Canada took what might be a crucial defeat in the Olympic tournament, but . . . "none of whom are considered hockey powers . . ." Come now, this is sacrilegious and slanderous to say the least. Of course, the fellow is probably from the U.S. and still shell-shocked over the 7-3 U.S. victory over Czechoslovakia. That victory has to rank as the upset of upsets, but well-deserved, mind. And a great game to watch too. On the other hand, now the Canadian team can only hope that things turn their way while continuing to play well, which they have been doing.

And speaking of well done, Jim Shields is one of the proudest parents in our town this week. His daughter Brenda captured the Canadian junior speed-skating championship on the weekend and his son, David, took two silvers and a bronze en route to second over-all in the Olympic men's category.

I can recall several years ago going to the Shields' household to meet the man (a former speed skater himself) who was then trying to keep the sport alive in Victoria and yes, B.C. as well. And nobody will ever know how many thousands of dollars of his own money, not to mention the time, Jim has put into the sport into the interim. Much of the time it was Jim alone who arranged the many trips for the skaters, spent countless hours looking after adminstrative details, training the youngsters and, in the days when government support for athletes wasn't always as generous as it might have been, Jim used to bend the rules a little. He used the family plan to get a better rate on the airlines. Some trips he had a pretty big family. Now two of his own have given him a small measure of reward with perhaps more to come some day soon. He deserves it.

And Stop Press! What's all this — Vancouver Canucks giving up Bill Derlago and Rick Vaive to Toronto for Tiger Williams and Jerry Butler? Sounds crazy at first, but let's see: Vaive, who played one year as an under-age pro with Birmingham of the WHA, was a first-round draft pick last fall but he hasn't lived up to that rating. Derlago was a top-rated centre with Brandon when he was selected two years ago but has never achieved his potential either possibly because of a severe knee injury with required surgery and kept him out of action much of last season.

So one answer could be that, in Williams, the Canucks get a designated hit-man who just might be the key to fit into coach Harry Neale's defensive mold, and Butler, who is also regarded more of a checker than an offensive threat, could also end up being a plus, the Canucks not being particularly noted for their defensive traits.

Williams, it is true, is always near the top in penalties, but he can score goals and has 22 to his credit this season. Question is can he score as many as he probably gives up when serving penalty time? Both provide defensive strength which neither Derlago and Vaive did and, as they haven't been that productive either, maybe Neale felt the move had to be made.

On the other hand, you don't really build for the future while giving up two of your top draft picks. Do you?

And Vaive may be the one to come back to haunt them. In 1976-77, playing with Sherbrooke Beavers in the Quebec Junior League, he was rookie of the year, scoring 51 goals. With Birmingham he was the team's top scorer with 26 goals and 33 assists.

Only time will tell.

Canada wins, but hopes slim

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP) — The cat-and-mouse game continues.

Will Paul Pageau be in goal Wednesday when Canada plays the Soviet Union? Or will the coaching trio of Clare Drake, Lorne Davis and Tom Watt decide to come back with Bob Dupuis, the unfortunate victim of the 100-foot goal Saturday night which led to Canada's undoing against Finland?

That was the $64,000 question again Monday, as it has been after every game, following Canada's 6-0 victory over Japan in hockey action at the 1980 Winter Olympics.

Despite Pageau's shutout performance, Drake would not commit himself to either goaltender.

"We'll make that determination after our practice tomorrow (today)," he said.

After Dupuis's miscue against the Finns, who won 4-3, which saw a puck travel almost the length of the ice and slide under his stick as he attempted to knock it into the corner, the identity of Canada's starting goaltender has become something of an obsession with the Canadian media here.

Pageau now has given up just one goal in two games, that one coming in a 5-1 victory Thursday over Poland. And while Drake would not tie himself down on the issue, he did admit "there's a good chance" Pageau will start.

John Devaney, Kevin Primeau, Paul MacLean, Ron Davidson, Warren Anderson and Dave Hindmarch scored for the Canadians, who outshot their outclassed and under-sized opponents 48-13, including a 23-2 margin in the final period.

Elsewhere in the Red Division, Vladimir Krutov, Alexander Maltsev and Boris Mikhailov scored in a 1:19 span in the last five minutes of play as the unbeaten Soviet Union subdued a determined Finland squad 4-2.

Nukka Porvari had scored twice, including a short-handed breakaway goal at 2:38 of the third period to give Finland, now 2-2, a 2-1 lead.

Jack De Heer, who once played with Lethbridge Broncos of the Western Hockey League, scored three goals as the Netherlands beat Poland 5-3, handing the Dutch squad its first Canada in an even more precarious position than it had found itself in heading into action Monday. Had Poland won, the chances of a three-way tie for second place in the division were good — in which case Canada would have got the nod and a berth in the medal round by virtue of a better goals for-and-against record in games involving the three clubs.

However, Poland is out of the running now and Canada win against two losses and a tie. Poland now is 1-3.

Despite the Canadians' victory, the Polish loss left must at least tie the Soviet Union on Wednesday or have the Netherlands upset Finland, because should the two teams end in a tie, Finland would advance on the strength of its win over Canada.

Times News Services

Imagine a maple tree from which all the leaves but one have fallen and around which all the neighbors have gathered, waiting for that last leaf to fall.

The onlookers know new leafs will bud and the tree will appear strong as ever in a new season. But that one leaf has their sympathy because they know it inevitably must be rejected by the tree.

That one leaf as far as Toronto hockey fans are concerned is the Maple Leafs' Darryl Sittler.

Two more Leafs — wingers Dave (Tiger) Williams and Jerry Butler — fell from the National Hockey League team Monday when the trade winds swirled them to Vancouver Canucks in exchange for budding forwards Rick Vaive and Bill Derlago.

However, the big question in Toronto was — when will Sittler be traded and to whom?

Sittler is the most-liked of the Leafs with the highest community profile. He has 29 goals and 39 assists this season, a mediocre one for him, but he has scored 32 points in his last 17 games.

However, Toronto general manager Punch Imlach appears determined to trade Sittler, especially after they got into a personality conflict.

Williams said he wasn't all that sad about leaving Toronto. He said he felt his intensity on the ice lately wasn't up to his usual.

"Maybe I didn't believe what was going on around here," Williams said as he packed Monday night in Uniondale, N.Y., to fly to Vancouver. The Leafs play New York Islanders tonight.

Even the manner in which he and Butler learned of the trade brought just a resigned shrug.

The Leafs arrived at Uniondale by bus early Monday morning and went out to get something to eat. Imlach met Williams in the hotel lobby afterwards and told him they had been traded.

Butler found out about the trade from Williams. The two were roommates on the road trip.

"I have no bad feelings," Williams said. "I don't give a damn if they traded me for a box of tape."

In games Monday, Detroit Red Wings plummeted into last place in the Norris Division by losing to Los Angeles Kings 4-2 while Hartford Whalers were beating New York Rangers 6-4 and Minnesota North Stars were whipping Quebec Nordiques 6-2.

Flora survives early troubles

Times News Services

Defending Canadian champion Flora Martin of Victoria received a fright in the first round of the British Columbia senior women's curling championships at Hollyburn Country Club in West Vancouver Monday before rallying to win her opening game from Kay Gable of Prince George 5-4.

Martin, trailing 3-0 after six ends, scored a single in the seventh, gave one back to Gable on the eighth, then stole three on the ninth to get even and one on the 10th for the victory.

Martin had a bye in the first round.

Connie Barker of North Vancouver is leading the competition 2-0. Barker defeated Shirley MacDonald of Dawson Creek 8-5 and Pearl Hiebert of Williams Lake 11-4.

Hiebert defeated Marg Johnston of Nanaimo 7-6. Shirley Hawke of White Rock lost both her games.

At Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Ontario skip John Kawaja remained cautiously optimistic despite two lopsided victories, a 4-0 record and first place after four draws at the Canadian junior men's championship.

"Tuesday is our big day," Kawaja said in reference to games against Manitoba and Quebec following Ontario's 9-2 eight-end win over New Brunswick in the fourth draw. Ontario defeated Yukon-Northwest Territories 10-5 in the first draw.

Stacey Coomber's Nanaimo rink, representing B.C., won two games to keep alive in the tournament. Coomber defeated Prince Edward Island 9-5 and Newfoundland 5-4. Coomber is 2-2.

Martin was super

Timing is so important in gymnastics — as every gymnast well knows.

Reeve Martin of Victoria timed things so well on the weekend that he shocked Canada's Olympic team member Owen Walstrom and strolled off with the top award as over-all champion in the annual Port Alberni Invitational gymnastics meet.

It was quite a performance by the 20-year-old protege of former Canadian national coach John Herb, who runs the Victoria Gymnastics School. He won the side horse, the high bar and parallel bar events and was third in both the vault and the floor exercises.

Although Martin hasn't done much before this locally, it wasn't his first taste of success. Last year in Holland he placed second over-all in a major meet.

Still, coach Herb didn't think he stood a chance of beating Walstrom, who came from Vancouver and was also a student of Herb for four years before moving to Port Alberni last year.

"I thought he wasn't able to beat Walstrom even when he was fit and well and Reeve had been sick with a cold," Herb explains. "But he put everything together, just super . . . and it was a nice surprise."

The timing was also just right as Martin will compete next week in the Olympic selection meet in Toronto when once again he'll run up against Walstrom. As well as Martin, Herb will have Dave Bibby, last year's provincial senior champion, at the selection meet.

Tonight in sports

Victoria Cougars dominate the local sports spotlight tonight.

Cougars have a chance to climb within one point of Western Division-leading Portland Winter Hawks while facing Seattle Breakers in a Western Hockey League game at 8 in Memorial Arena.

In other local hockey action, Saanich Braves face Juan de Fuca Gulls in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" League game at 7:30 in Pearkes Arena.

The remainder of local sports action centres around basketball.

In intercollegiate exhibitions, University of Victoria Vikettes tackle Simon Fraser University Clanswomen in a game at 6:30 and UVic Vikings and Clansmen meet in a men's game at 8.

St. Michael's University School pays a visit to Reynolds for a Greater Victoria High School Boys' "A" League sudden-death playoff at 7:30.

At 8, Victoria is at Mt. Douglas, Oak Bay at Belmont and Spectrum at Parkland in Greater Victoria High School Boys' "AA" League games.

And, Vidalin Construction meets UVic Jayvees at 9 in a Victoria Senior "B" Women's League playoff tussle.

On television, coverage of the Winter Olympic Games still commands viewer attention.

Channel 8 continues coverage at 5 with a wrap-up feature at 11:45.

On Channel 2, telecasting begins at 7 with a highlight of the day's competition at 11:45.

Channel 4 begins coverage at 8 with special features and highlights at 11:30.

abby

Dear Abby: My boyfriend of two years (I'll call him Al) has been seeing a divorced woman for the last six months (sleeping with her) on a regular basis.

When I found out about it, I confronted him with it and he admitted it. I should tell you that he and I have never been intimate because I have moral convictions concerning premarital sex.

He sees me about three nights a week, and we have a very enjoyable, lovable relationship.

What bothers me the most is that he was dishonest with me all along. He says he loves me and not her, which I believe.

Do you think he could really love me and sleep with her? I value your opinion.

Confused

Dear Confused:

Yes it's possible that Al has been enjoying a physical (non-love) relationship with the other woman, which is all right with me provided it's all right with her. She's filling one of his needs, and he's obviously filling one of hers. I'm not asking you to condone it — just understand it.

Dear Abby:

My mother-in-law wonders why she and her husband aren't invited to our home more often. We would love to have them for two hours, but when they come, they stay from four to six hours!

And as if that weren't enough, they hardly ever come alone; they usually have from two to 10 "surprise guests" whom "Mom" has invited. She greets me with her famous one-liner, "Don't worry about cooking, we brought the food."

Well, Abby, there is more to serving a decent meal than putting a casserole on the table.

We don't appreciate being told whom and when we will entertain and what we will serve.

The next time Mom pulls this stunt, she may be serving her guests on the sidewalk.

Steamed

Dear Steamed:

Wouldn't it simplify matters, and avert an ugly confrontation, if you and your husband were to direct your complaints to the offending party? Your irritation is justified, but your proposed "cure" would be worse than the disease.

Dear Abby:

You said, "Parents who smoke pot in front of their small children are guilty of 'child abuse.' "

Well, how about parents who smoke cigarettes in front of children?

Every time an adult lights up in the presence of a child, the child is forced to breathe whatever the adult is smoking.

The decision to smoke anything is no longer only the business of the smoker since his smoking does damage to those who must breathe second-hand smoke.

Carole

Dear Carole:

Right On! That message is told clearly and in greater detail in a booklet, Second-Hand Smoke. It's available (without charge) through your local lung association.

Turncoat for spring

Spring showers are on the way and while heavier garb can be shed in favor of lightweights, who wants to get caught in a downpour brought on by a sudden change in the weather.

Here's an item that's light and smart and changes just as fast as those rainclouds appear — from rose tones to turquoise and grey as it moves.

This Iridescent Quiana raincoat has built up shoulders which are tucked and quilted on this slimline style which rertails in Victoria area stores for about $140.

19th Century lingerie returns

By ANNE-MARIE SCHIRO
New York Times

A walk through a lingerie department these days is like a visit to great-grandma's attic. The racks are awash with Victorian-looking nightgowns, robes, petticoats and camisoles in sparkling white cotton. Delicate touches of embroidery in blue, pink or lavender and occasional insets of lace or ribbons heighten the Victorian effect.

Until recently, devotees of romantic lingerie had to scour the antique clothing stores where garments in pristine condition might cost $200. Often, clothing at more reasonable prices meant ripped lace to be repaired or stains that might not come out in the wash.

But the fresh look of starched white cotton or linen started to appear at summer parties as well as in the boudoir. Some ready-to-wear designers adapted the look into romantic blouses and dresses while lingerie designers discovered that all women weren't averse to the thought of woven cottons that might need ironing.

"I don't iron my cotton and linen nightgowns every time I wear them," said Ellen Stein, a designer of Victorian-inspired lingerie. "I simply hang them on hangers and let them dry. They get a soft, sort of crinkly look that's very pretty."

A onetime bridal designer, she went into business three years ago with her sister, Silvia Greenberg. Their line, which is lavished with ruffles and ribbons and often trimmed with antique laces, ranges in price from $40 for a camisole to about $150 for a dressing gown. The prices are high, Mrs. Greenberg admits, because they insist on French seams, hand-sewn hems with lace binding and Swiss embroideries.

Ora Feder has been making cotton lingerie since 1975, when she produced a line for Bloomingdale's. She imported handkerchief-weight cotton and trimmed it with embroidered handkerchiefs from Madeira.

"They sold for $55 or $60 then," she recalled recently. "Now they're twice as much because the fabrics keep going up and the dollar keeps going down. But I'm still doing a steady business in cotton all year round."

Not all cotton lingerie is that costly. Most is in the $30-to-$50 bracket.

One of the ways manufacturers cut expenses is to use embroidered handkerchiefs from China, which are cheaper than those from Europe and cheaper than buying embroidered fabrics. The squares are cut up and used as trimming or in some cases as the bodice of a nightgown or the cups of a bra.

Iris Lingerie, a 50-year-old company that was taken over three years ago by Saramae, a volume manufacturer, keeps prices down by producing everything in its own factories. One is in Puerto Rico, the other in Lower Manhattan.

"We order the Chinese handkerchiefs and the fabrics two years ahead," said Bert Yelin, designer and president of Saramae, "and we order in volume."

The company also uses a cotton-polyester blend that looks and feels like cotton batiste for those who don't admire the look of wrinkled cotton. Many of the Iris nightgowns are $30 and $32.

Hanky Panky, a small company started two and a half years ago by Lida Orzeck and Gale Epstein, quickly became known for its fresh, young approach to cotton sleepwear and underwear. "Our idea," said Miss Epstein, the designer, "is to get the Victorian look to customers at a price." Hanky Panky's nightgowns, made of domestic cottons and Chinese handkerchiefs, sell for about $40.

Henri Bendel's lingerie buyer, Janine Weller, says she's made a point of searching out cotton nightgowns at a price.

"We can't keep them in stock," she said. "It started last summer with some tied-on-the-shoulder nighties from Hanky Panky. We were selling six a day. Then in the fall we had some cotton flannel gowns for $20 and sold every piece. People were buying five and six at a time. Just before Christmas, we had some cotton batistes for $28 to $50 and they sold out, too. Eighty percent of our nightgowns for spring are white cotton. This is a white year."

Saks Fifth Avenue, which has always carried a line of trousseau cottons from Italy, now also has a wide selection of cotton lingerie by such manufacturers as Iris, Hanky Panky, Christian Dior, Eve Stillman and Fernando Sanchez. For spring, they plan to add the collection of Ellen Stein for Silvia Greenberg.

"We ran an ad last February for the Iris handkerchief gowns," a spokesman reports, "and sold out on one of the coldest days of the year. The trend has been growing ever since."

Bloomingdale's fashion director of lingerie, Lee Fabris, says she's been a believer in cotton lingerie ever since the success of those Ora Feder things five years ago. "But at one time you could only get cottons in the spring and summer," she said. "Now beautiful cottons sell in September, October, November, all year round."

Mrs. Weller of Bendel's feels that the women who are now discovering the comfort of sleeping in cotton will be wanting woven cotton underwear. "The little bias camisole with lace edging and matching tap pants — that's the underwear they'll want for summer," she predicted.

Same old soap isn't so

TORONTO (CP) — The sweet smell of success perfumes the air around the Taylor Soaps-Perfumes Co. plant.

Founded in 1865 by owner-president James Taylor's grandfather, the firm manufactures some 30 million bars annually for more than 10 companies — including several of North America's leading cosmetic brands.

But consumers who believe that the soaps — sold under various names, in different packages and at a wide range of prices — are essentially the same are wrong, Taylor said.

Each company ships its particular creams, emulsions, perfumes and dyes to the Taylor plant where the product is manufactured according to specification.

Early in the process, those "secret ingredients" are added to Taylor's own soap base, an unappealing concoction of tallow — a meat byproduct — coconut oil and sodium hydroxide, more commonly known as lye.

The recipe is basically the same one that housewives used for centures before companies like Taylor began mass-producing beauty soaps with such charming names as Violette and Peau d'Espagne.

Two exceptions to the tallow, oil and lye formula are medicinal soaps made from synthetics and soaps with a health-food flavor made from vegetwble oils.

One reason why American firms come to him, Taylor says, is quality control.

"Standards are much higher here than in the U.S. Soap inspections in the U.S. are often slipshod which means poorly milled soaps containing tiny bubbles and imperfections."

Taylor's soaps are finely milled, with a smoother texture and greater density than regular commercial soaps.

Milling, a technique developed in France, is an expensive process that uses first granite and then polished, water-cooled steel rollers to grind the soap. A finely milled soap lasts longer because the density is greater.

Taylor is a down-to-earth businessman who gives short shrift to the often magical qualities ascribed to a simple bar of soap.

Soap that floats does it to attract the consumer's attention, he says, while herbal essences and such add nothing more than fragrance.

In Taylor's view, the most important ingredient is lanolin, a byproduct of sheep's wool that is an effective skin softener.

He also recommends the addition of oatmeal, for its mildly abrasive quality.

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

You seem to say it like it is. That's why I'm writing to you. You know the problems kids my age (I'm 16) are having with their parents about smoking grass. They don't understand that it's all around us and that there isn't any party we go to that grass doesn't break out.

I'm willing to listen to you because you have no axe to grind. Is marijuana really as dangerous as some people say? Please give me a straight answer — aside from the legality of marijuana which is a whole other area. Thank you.

Ryan J.

Dear Ryan:

Thanks for your faith in me. You know by now that I am not "in cahoots" with parents. When I feel that parents are too rigid I openly say so. Adolescence is a turbulent time of life. In an effort to break away from the restrictions of parents and teachers, to show their new-found independence of thought many teen-agers refuse to acknowledge the validity of their parents' admonitions.

Marijuana is one of the major sources of conflict. I want to examine with you some of the hazards of marijuana and see if we can't come to a mutual conclusion.

You are wrong when you say that I don't have an axe to grind. I definitely do. I'm firmly convinced that marijuana is a dangerous drug and one that must be socially eliminated if we are to spare today's youth the penalty that they will ultimately pay for its use and abuse.

Cannabis (marijuana, hashish) may appear to be harmless. It is not. Besides the physical damage to the brain and to other organs of the body, the psychological consequences of the abuse of marijuana are similar to the toxic effects of many other dangerous drugs. It is well-known that marijuana smokers tend to antisocial acts, irresponsibility, poor concentration, reduced motivation at school and work, poor reflexes and reckless driving that have made mortality statistics out of lives that were once headed for potential accomplishment and happiness.

Social involvement with one illegal drug tempts experimentation with another. The market for marijuana too closely overlaps the market for cocaine, amphetamines, downers, alcohol, LSD, heroin and the groups of hypnotic drugs. Many young people (and adults) who are on a grass high are more easily tempted to get a higher high with something new. Soon the susceptible ones "graduate" to dangerous drug addiction.

More and more hazards of marijuana will undoubtedly be uncovered as scientific studies progress. Think how long it took us to learn the grim facts about tobacco!
